PITTSBURGH TANK BLAST KILLS 28

EXPLOSION THIS MORNING ROCKS CITY

WRECKS 5,000,000 CUBIC FOOT
GAS TANK OF EQUITABLE GAS CO.

POLICE BELIEVE DEATH TOLL
WOULD REACH 40; 5,000
PEOPLE HOMELESS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 14.—(UP)—Twenty-eight persons were known dead and at least a score injured in an explosion today which wrecked the 5,000,000 cubic foot gas tank of the Equitable Gas Company.

Shortly after one o'clock the body of a man was located on the superstructure which was standing at the side of the tank. It was lowered by firemen and removed to the morgue. Firemen said they had learned fifteen or twenty men were working on the superstructure of the tank with welding machines when the explosion rocked the city.

Police on the basis of a hurried checkup at the scene of the disaster predicted the death toll would reach forty. They estimated 5,000 persons were made homeless.

Rescue workers and hospital attaches would place no estimate on the number of injured but it was said that it ran into hundreds, many of whom probably would die.

The building of the Pittsburgh Clay Pot Co. adjacent to the gas works was believed to have many bodies imprisoned in the basement. Workmen were clearing away the debris in an effort to reach them.

Seventy-two of the 80 men employed at the city asphalt plant in the rear of the gas works were missing. Up until one o'clock no effort had been made to search for victims there.

Rescuers and repairmen experienced danger because at least 100 homes and factories in the affected area were so damaged that they were unsafe.

Buildings occasionally were falling hours after the explosion, and several persons were injured. Thousands of persons were milling around the scene and police had difficulty in holding them back.

Every available policeman was assigned to the disaster area.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 14.—At least 28 persons were killed and 300 injured today when a gas tank of 5,000,000 cubic feet capacity exploded, rocking this city and surrounding towns and spreading destruction over a wide area.

Seventeen others were missing and possibly were buried in wreckage. It was estimated 5,000 were made homeless.

The terrific explosion, occurring at the Manchester works of the Equitable Gas Co., sent the steel sides of the huge tank hurtling for thousands of yards in every direction.

A great ball of fire, consisting of ignited gas, leaped into the sky and hung there.

Buildings in the crowded industrial district were blown apart and knocked in by the concussion. Roofs collapsed. Hundreds of men and women workers were imperilled by the falling walls and the fiery gases that raced through the district. At first it was believed hundreds had been trapped and killed but as the fires cooled and rescue workers made their way cautiously between tottering walls, it was found that many had miraculous escapes.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 14.—The toll mounted to 28 known dead, 17 missing and approximately 300 in hospitals this afternoon in the explosion of a 5,000,000 cubic foot gas tank of the Equitable Gas Co. here today.

Most of the 90 men reported as trapped in the basement of the Pittsburgh Clay Pot Co. with flames approaching the building, were accounted for late this afternoon.

The last checkup showed that only eight of the men were still missing. The fire which was approaching considerably and firemen thought that the building would not burn.

GEORGE REMUS ON TRIAL, IS CHARGED WITH WIFE MURDER

CLAIMED CINCINNATI MAN MADE MILLIONS AS "KING OF BOOTLEGGERS"

DEFENDANT PLEADS HIS OWN CASE AGAINST THOSE WHO PROSECUTE HIM

By PAUL W. WHITE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Court Room, Cincinnati, O., Nov. 14.—George Remus, once the "King of Bootleggers," opened his own trial for the alleged murder of his wife today, pleading his own case and winning the first skirmish against those who would send him to death.

Hardly had court opened when Remus took up actively his own defense. His first move made certain his foster daughter, Miss Ruth Holmes Remus, and Franklin Dodge Jr., who, Remus alleges, stole Mrs. Remus' affection, would appear as witnesses.

Remus, his voice at times expressing indignation, said that Dodge, Miss Remus, Mrs. Grace Campbell and Harry F. Brown were "confederates of the deceased" and possessed important papers taken from his (Remus') house while he was at Atlanta penitentiary serving a sentence for violation of the prohibition laws.

Dodge is a former department of justice operative who unearthed much of the evidence against "The King of Bootleggers."

Mrs. Campbell is Remus' sister and Brown is her brother.

Remus, a stocky, well-dressed man, asked that the four bring with them to court business papers and records "vital to the defense in this case."

Charles P. Taft, Jr., prosecuting attorney, objected with vigor. But the court ruled in favor of Remus. Selection of a jury then began—a slow, tedious process which may consume a week.

PRINCE HENRY THROWN FROM HORSE IN FOX HUNTING

Melton Mowbray, England, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Prince Henry, younger brother of the Prince of Wales, narrowly escaped serious injury today when as he was fox hunting his horse fell heavily at an obstacle, throwing Prince Henry completely over its head.

The horse, struggling to rise, barely missed stepping on Prince Henry's chest. Henry rolled aside and was not injured.

He resumed the hunt on another mount.

VIOLENT EARTH TREMORS FELT IN CHILE TODAY

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Violent earth tremors lasting nearly a minute were felt here at 3:25 a. m. today. They were felt also at Valparaiso and interior points.

Some houses were damaged by the shock.

BURNS DENIES ANY WRONG DOING OF SLEUTHS

W. SHERMAN BURNS AND FATH- ER, WM. J. BURNS, BEFORE GRAND JURY

3RD APPEARANCE BEFORE BODY PROBING JURY TAMPERING CHARGES

By HERBERT LITTLE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Nov. 14.—Flat denial of the government's charge that Burns operatives shadowing the Fall-Sinclair jury falsified affidavits apparently designed to force a mistrial of the case was made today by W. Sherman Burns, directing head of the international detective agency.

He and his father, the famous William J. Burns, "The eye that never sleeps," today expected to make their third appearance before the grand jury investigating jury tampering conspiracy charges against Harry F. Sinclair, oil multi-millionaire, and two of his lieutenants, Mason Day and Sheldon Clark.

Another son, Raymond Burns, secretary of the Burns agency, was drawn into the case today and was ready to go before the grand jury.

W. Sherman Burns, as spokesman for his father, said the entire story of William J. McMullen, who worked as "William V. Long," Burns operative "L-36," while he was a spy for the government, was false.

McMullen's story was that at the request of Burns agents, he made a false affidavit on which W. J. Burns based charges of government jury tampering by a justice department official.

Neil Burkinshaw, assistant U. S. attorney directing the grand jury investigation, took officials of the Mayflower and Wardman Park hotels before the grand jury first today. Sinclair and Day stayed at the Mayflower and the Burns jury shadowers maintained headquarters at the Wardman Park.

ECHOES OF ST. PAUL MALT STORE RAIDS MADE OCTOBER 8TH

FEDERAL JUDGE W. A. CANT QUASHES THE SEARCH WARRANT

ORDERS RETURN OF THE CON- FISCATED GOODS AND MATERIAL

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 14.—(UP)—Federal Judge W. A. Cant today quashed the search warrant under which seizures were made in a St. Paul malt store raid Oct. 8, and ordered return of the confiscated goods.

With the government libel action of the goods still pending, Judge Cant signed the order subject to the right of the government in the property under the libel action, and ruled that the order for the return of the goods should not be put into effect until the libel action could be disposed of in federal court.

A stay of six days' execution was granted on the order, and it is believed that by that time Judge Cant expects to have the libel action disposed of in federal court. He is sitting at Mankato in the government prosecution of the officials of the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank.

Judge Cant's order today follows a similar one signed in the Supply Co., Minneapolis, case.

TOWN OF GARBER, 50 POPULATION, GOES UNDER HAMMER

Branson, Mo., Nov. 14.—(UP)—The little town of Garber—population 50—has gone under the hammer.

The village in Taney county, featured in Harold Bell Wright's book "The Shepherd of the Hills," has been purchased by Mrs. Ada Clodfelter. It is one of the oldest towns in the state.

The purchase includes postoffice, railroad station, buildings and homes.

FIRES IN NATIVE QUARTER OF HANKOW ARE EXTINGUISHED

BRITISH WIRELESS DISPATCHES FROM CHINESE CITY QUOTED

DENY EARLIER REPORTS THAT AMERICAN AND BRITISH WERE LANDED

Shanghai, Nov. 14.—(UP)—4:30 P. M.—British wireless dispatches from Hankow said this afternoon that fires in the native city had been extinguished. These denied earlier reports that American and British marines had been landed to protect foreign lives and property.

The dispatches said also that Nanking troops had not yet entered the city.

It was expected, the dispatches said, that Nanking troops would enter the city peacefully tonight or tomorrow morning.

General Ho Chien, it was added, had established headquarters at Yang Yang, across the Han river from Hankow, and might decide to defend Han-Yang and Wu-Chang.

French and Japanese marines, it was said, were guarding foreign concessions against looting.

Nanking troops, the dispatches said, were searching all Yangtze river ships for Tang Sen-Chi, whose desertion of his post as commander of the radical nationalist garrison at Hankow precipitated the present crisis.

Tang abandoned his army which advancing moderate nationalists of the Nanking government had forced into a disorderly retreat.

Tang, it was reported in Shanghai, had succeeded in evading his pursuers and will arrive here tonight aboard the steamer Han-Yang.

It is reported that Ho Chien is negotiating with the Nanking leaders in order to prevent looting of cities in Wuhan province.

It is considered likely, from the tenor of reports, that many defeated radical-nationalist generals will go over to their former allies of Nanking.

Fires and looting in Hankow that threatened for a time to reach serious proportions, were the work of Tang's demoralized troops.

London, Nov. 14.—The Daily Mail Hankow correspondent reported today that many peasants, armed with knives and pitchforks, were harrowing villages and looting houses in the country between Hankow and Shanghai.

MILLION DOLLAR FORD PLANT AT YOKOHAMA, JAPAN

Detroit, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Edsel Ford today announced plans for building a $1,000,000 Ford plant at Yokohama, Japan.

Construction will start immediately, he said, and the plant will be ready to produce 200 Fords a day by August, 1928.

A site has been secured by the Ford Motor Company of Japan, Ltd.

CHECK DRILLING IS NOW BEING CARRIED ON

RECENT DRILLING DEVELOPS ANOTHER PIT NEAR HILL- CREST

NEW PIT WILL PRODUCE MAN- GANIFEROUS IRON ORE

The Manganiferous Iron Company, operating the Louise mine at Iron-ore, has taken an option of a lease of the Hillcrest property, the Arko property and adjoining lands, and is check-drilling for a short time. The Hillcrest property already has one open pit on it, having been developed years ago to produce iron ore. Recent drilling developed another open pit north of it and the ground will be stripped this winter.

The new pit will produce manganiferous iron ore. This work will also tend to restore the old Arko mine, which is an underground operation of war days and from which the deeper ore in the new Hillcrest pit will also be mined eventually.

Emmett Butler of Butler Brothers, contractors, is president of the Manganiferous Iron Company. He is also a brother of U. S. Supreme Court Justice Pierce Butler.

CONFESSES HE KILLED WIFE FOR HER INSURANCE

ALVIN GREENWALDT OF MIL- WAUKEE HIRED ASSASSIN FOR DEED

ARTHUR R. BETZOLD CHOKED HER TO DEATH. AUTHORI- TIES SAID

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 14.—(UP)—Broken by a week of questioning, Alvin Greenwaldt has confessed that he planned the murder of his wife to obtain her insurance, and hired Arthur R. Betzold to choke her to death, police said today.

Betzold, known also as "Kelley," readily admitted, police said, that he did the actual slaying, remarking only that "I didn't know it was so easy for anybody to die."

The body of Mrs. Greenwaldt was found on a highway.

A few hours after the discovery of the body, Greenwaldt staggered into a roadhouse and told of having been attacked as he and his wife drove along the road.

He said he had lain unconscious for two hours and exhibited a lacerated scalp as evidence that he had been struck.

Police thinking the wound in his head too slight to cause two hours' unconsciousness, held him in custody pending an investigation.

Greenwaldt broke down last night, police said, and told his story.

"I needed money," he said, "and my wife had a $20,000 life insurance policy. I hit upon the idea of killing her. Knowing Kelley as a 'hard guy,' I offered him $500. He grabbed at the chance."

"So last Tuesday night I brought my wife to Milwaukee and on the way back I picked up Kelley. A few miles out he just reached over and took her by the throat and held her till she died."

PANIC IN FIRE CAUSES DEATH OF 8 PEOPLE IN HOTEL

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 14.—(UP)—Panic was blamed by firemen for the death of eight persons suffocated and burned to death in a minor hotel fire here early yesterday.

Only $7,000 damage was done by the fire in the Graystone hotel, Fire Chief Hutsell pointed out to support his belief that the eight victims had lost their heads and dashed headlong into the flames instead of remaining in their rooms until firemen could reach them.

Twelve persons were injured in the fire.

NEGRO LEPER IS DEFENDANT IN MURDER TRIAL

ED PAYTON OF BATON ROUGE, LA., IS SCHEDULED TO BE TRIED

ONE OF MOST PECULIAR MURDER TRIALS IN AMERICA BE- GINS TODAY

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 14.—(UP)—One of America's most peculiar murder trials was scheduled to begin here today, with Ed Payton, a negro leper, as the defendant.

Payton is charged with the murder of Lloyd Richards, a fellow inmate in the federal leprosarium at Carrville, La.

Authorities were admittedly skeptical as to whether citizens could be induced to sit on a jury where the defendant was a leper and ten of the witnesses were afflicted with the disease.

Dr. E. O. Denny, in charge of the leprosarium, attempted to put these fears at rest with a statement in which he said "the danger of contracting the disease in the courtroom is nil."

"Leprosy is contagious through constant contact or association such as living in the same house with a leper for a period of years and wearing his clothes or using the towels he uses," Dr. Denny said.

However there was much skepticism as to whether jurors would adopt the scientific attitude.

It was rumored the government might bring Payton into court in a glass cage, but this was not considered probable since the ten witnesses who are lepers, could not be encased.

According to Dr. Denny, Payton has ten or twelve years to live, at most.

It was charged Payton shot Richards to death "without provocation."

RUTH ELDER GOING BACK TO HER HUSBAND

Washington, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Ruth Elder is going back to her husband in Panama, she said today on her arrival here to lunch at the White House with Charles Lindbergh and other noted fliers.

But first she must complete the "activities" resulting from her recent trans-Atlantic flight attempt. She said she was "strongly considering" a 20-week lecture tour the contract for which has been offered her. She will return to New York tonight to make a definite decision, she stated.

She said she preferred lecturing to acting in the movies or on the stage.

She denied reports of an estrangement between herself and Lyle Womack, her husband. Womack did not accompany her here, but planned to return to Panama from New York today, she said.

CAPT. GILES TO TAKE OFF TUESDAY FOR HONOLULU

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Captain Frederick A. Giles will take off from here Tuesday for Honolulu on the first leg of his flight to Australia, if weather conditions permit, he said today.

3 FLIERS SWIM UNTIL THEY ARE RESCUED

PLANE LANDS WITH BROKEN FLOAT, ENGINE STALLED ON THEM

HAD TAKEN OFF FOR ATTEMPT- ED FLIGHT TO NEW- FOUNDLAND

Horta, Fayal Island, Azores, Nov. 14.—(UP)—A motor explosion is reported to have caused the wrecking of the German Heinkel plane, D-1220, after it had taken off Sunday on an attempted flight to Newfoundland. The three fliers swam until rescued after the plane had landed with a broken float.

Because of the accident to the D-1220, the flight of the German Junker's plane, D-1230, which was to have carried the Viennese actress, Mile. Lillie Dillenz, across the Atlantic, was postponed.

Much excitement had been caused in Horta Saturday by announcement from pilot of both crafts that they would attempt trans-Atlantic flights yesterday.

In keeping with the announcement, the Heinkel plane, piloted by Horst Merz, rose from the water at 2:35 A. M. yesterday. Shortly thereafter its engine stopped and it alighted on the sea with a broken float.

At the time of the accident the sea was calm. Captain M. Pinto hastened to the spot in a motor launch. After hauling the crew out of the water, he stood by until another launch arrived. Together they towed the D-1220 inside the breakwater. The fliers have refused to comment on the cause of the accident.

The two planes had been waiting for weather favorable to their trans-Atlantic attempts. The Junkers plane had arrived two weeks earlier than the Heinkel. Mile. Dillenz was in Horta when Ruth Elder and Captain George Haldeman were brought here after they had been rescued by the Dutch tanker, Barendrecht, when their plane, American Girl, was forced down at sea by engine trouble.

The Heinkel plane, D-1220, left Warnemuende, Germany, more than a month ago. It flew by easy stages to Lisbon and thence to Horta. At Lisbon, Pilot Merz announced that he intended flying to New York by way of Newfoundland.

WOMAN PLEADS GUILTY TO LIQUOR LAW INFRACTION

St. Paul, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Mrs. Emma Hulvey, proprietor of a candy shop, who didn't see why she couldn't get by with it like everybody else does, today pleaded guilty to maintaining a liquor nuisance, and was held under bail bond of $200 to be sentenced in federal court Tuesday.

Police declared they found a quantity of moonshine liquor and seven drunken men in the establishment operated by Mrs. Hulvey.

"Everybody else is doing it, and I don't see why I couldn't get by with it," she told the court.

"In such a case I think the usual fine isn't sufficient," the court declared. "I'll pass sentence Tuesday."

HANSON'S FATE IN JURY HANDS THIS AFTERNOON

St. Paul, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Arthur "Wicky" Hanson's fate will rest with a jury probably late today. Hanson is on trial for the murder of James Barrett, whom he charged with the murder of at least ten St. Paul persons during a reign of crime here over a period of a year.

The defense sprung a surprise today when it closed its case after but 10 of the 30 defense witnesses ordered to appear had been placed on the witness stand. The defense contended that Hanson's killing of Barrett was justified.

ECHOES OF ST. PAUL MALT STORE RAIDS MADE OCTOBER 8TH

FEDERAL JUDGE W. A. CANT QUASHES THE SEARCH WARRANT

ORDERS RETURN OF THE CONFISCATED GOODS AND MATERIAL

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 14.—(UP)—Federal Judge W. A. Cant today quashed the search warrant under which seizures were made in a St. Paul malt store raid Oct. 8, and ordered return of the confiscated goods.

With the government libel action of the goods still pending, Judge Cant signed the order subject to the right of the government in the property under the libel action, and ruled that the order for the return of the goods should not be put into effect until the libel action could be disposed of in federal court.

A stay of six days' execution was granted on the order, and it is believed that by that time Judge Cant expects to have the libel action disposed of in federal court. He is sitting at Mankato in the government prosecution of the officials of the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank.

St. Paul, Nov. 14.—(UP)—J. H. Hensel, pensioned paymaster of the Northern Pacific railroad, is critically ill at the Northern Pacific hospital.

CONFESSES HE KILLED WIFE FOR HER INSURANCE

ALVIN GREENWALDT OF MILWAUKEE HIRED ASSASSIN FOR DEED

ARTHUR R. BETZOLD CHOKED HER TO DEATH, AUTHORTIES SAID

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 14.—(UP)—Broken by a week of questioning, Alvin Greenwaldt has confessed that he planned the murder of his wife to obtain her insurance, and hired Arthur R. Betzold to choke her to death, police said today.

Betzold, known also as "Kelley," readily admitted, police said, that he did the actual slaying, remarking only that "I didn't know it was so easy for anybody to die."

The body of Mrs. Greenwaldt was found on a highway.

A few hours after the discovery of the body, Greenwaldt staggered into a roadhouse and told of having been attacked as he and his wife drove along the road.

He said he had lain unconscious for two hours and exhibited a lacerated scalp as evidence that he had been struck.

Police thinking the wound in his head too slight to cause two hours' unconsciousness, held him in custody pending an investigation.

Greenwaldt broke down last night, police said, and told his story.

"I needed money," he said, "and my wife had a $20,000 life insurance policy. I hit upon the idea of killing her. Knowing Kelley as a 'hard guy,' I offered him $500. He grabbed at the chance."

"So last Tuesday night I brought my wife to Milwaukee and on the way back I picked up Kelley. A few miles out he just reached over and took her by the throat and held her till she died."

PANIC IN FIRE CAUSES DEATH OF 8 PEOPLE IN HOTEL

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 14.—(UP)—Panic was blamed by firemen for the death of eight persons suffocated and burned to death in a minor hotel fire here early yesterday.

Only $7,000 damage was done by the fire in the Graystone hotel. Fire Chief Hutsell pointed out to support his belief that the eight victims had lost their heads and dashed headlong into the flames instead of remaining in their rooms until firemen could reach them.

Twelve persons were injured in the fire.

NEGRO LEPER IS DEFENDANT IN MURDER TRIAL

ED PAYTON OF BATON ROUGE, LA., IS SCHEDULED TO BE TRIED

ONE OF MOST PECULIAR MURDER TRIALS IN AMERICA BEGINS TODAY

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 14.—(UP)—One of America's most peculiar murder trials was scheduled to begin here today, with Ed Payton, a negro leper, as the defendant.

Payton is charged with the murder of Lloyd Richards, a fellow inmate in the federal leprosarium at Carville, La.

Authorities were admittedly skeptical as to whether citizens could be induced to sit on a jury where the defendant was a leper and ten of the witnesses were afflicted with the disease.

Dr. E. O. Denny, in charge of the leprosarium, attempted to put these fears at rest with a statement in which he said "the danger of contracting the disease in the courtroom is nil."

"Leprosy is contagious through constant contact or association such as living in the same house with a leper for a period of years and wearing his clothes or using the towels he uses," Dr. Denny said.

However there was much skepticism as to whether jurors would adopt the scientific attitude.

It was rumored the government might bring Payton into court in a glass cage, but this was not considered probable since the ten witnesses who are lepers, could not be encased.

According to Dr. Benny, Payton has ten or twelve years to live, at most.

It was charged Payton shot Richards to death "without provocation."

RUTH ELDER GOING BACK TO HER HUSBAND

Washington, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Ruth Elder is going back to her husband in Panama, she said today on her arrival here to lunch at the White House with Charles Lindbergh and other noted fliers.

But first she must complete the "activities" resulting from her recent trans-Atlantic flight attempt. She said she was "strongly considering" a 20-week lecture tour the contract for which has been offered her. She will return to New York tonight to make a definite decision, she stated.

She said she preferred lecturing to acting in the movies or on the stage.

She denied reports of an estrangement between herself and Lyle Womack, her husband. Womack did not accompany her here, but planned to return to Panama from New York today, she said.

CAPT. GILES TO TAKE OFF TUESDAY FOR HONOLULU

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Captain Frederick A. Giles will take off from here Tuesday for Honolulu on the first leg of his flight to Australia, if weather conditions permit, he said today.

3 FLIERS SWIM UNTIL THEY ARE RESCUED

PLANE LANDS WITH BROKEN FLOAT, ENGINE STALLED ON THEM

HAD TAKEN OFF FOR ATTEMPTED FLIGHT TO NEW-FOUNDLAND

Horta, Fayal Island, Azores, Nov. 14.—(UP)—A motor explosion is reported to have caused the wrecking of the German Heinkel plane, D-1220, after it had taken off Sunday on an attempted flight to Newfoundland. The three fliers swam until rescued after the plane had landed with a broken float.

Because of the accident to the D-1220, the flight of the German Junker's plane, D-1230, which was to have carried the Viennese actress, Mile, Lillie Dillenz, across the Atlantic, was postponed.

Much excitement had been caused in Horta Saturday by announcement from pilot of both crafts that they would attempt trans-Atlantic flights yesterday.

In keeping with the announcement, the Heinkel plane, piloted by Horst Merz, rose from the water at 2:35 A. M. yesterday. Shortly thereafter its engine stopped and it alighted on the sea with a broken float.

At the time of the accident the sea was calm. Captain M. Pinto hastened to the spot in a motor launch. After hauling the crew out of the water, he stood by until another launch arrived. Together they towed the D-1220 inside the breakwater. The fliers have refused to comment on the cause of the accident.

The two planes had been waiting for weather favorable to their trans-Atlantic attempts. The Junker's plane had arrived two weeks earlier than the Heinkel. Mile Dillenz was in Horta when Ruth Elder and Captain George Haldeman were brought here after they had been rescued by the Dutch tanker, Barendrecht, when their plane, American Girl, was forced down at sea by engine trouble.

The Heinkel plane, D-1220, left Warnemunde, Germany, more than a month ago. It flew by easy stages to Lisbon and thence to Horta. At Lisbon, Pilot Merz announced that he intended flying to New York by way of Newfoundland.

WOMAN PLEADS GUILTY TO LIQUOR LAW INFRACTION

St. Paul, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Mrs. Emma Hulvey, proprietor of a candy shop, who didn't see why she couldn't get by with it like everybody else does, today pleaded guilty to maintaining a liquor nuisance, and was held under bail bond of $200 to be sentenced in federal court Tuesday.

Police declared they found a quantity of moonshine liquor and seven drunken men in the establishment operated by Mrs. Hulvey.

"Everybody else is doing it, and I don't see why I couldn't get by with it," she told the court.

"In such a case I think the usual fine isn't sufficient," the court declared. "I'll pass sentence Tuesday."

HANSON'S FATE IN JURY HANDS THIS AFTERNOON

St. Paul, Nov. 14.—(UP)—Arthur "Wicky" Hanson's fate will rest with a jury probably late today. Hanson is on trial for the murder of James Barrett, whom he charged with the murder of at least ten St. Paul persons during a reign of crime here over a period of a year.

The defense sprung a surprise today when it closed its case after but 10 of the 30 defense witnesses ordered to appear had been placed on the witness stand. The defense contended that Hanson's killing of Barrett was justified.

Know Your Sweetheart by His Handwriting

By EDNA PURDY WALSH
Editor, Character Reading Magazine.

The Industrious Sweetheart
The truly industrious man does not believe in wasting much time. We do not expect, therefore, to see very large margins and much space wasted around words and between letters, yet the writing may not be cramped at all, to denote stinginess.

find it
Looped f's and t's, Energy.

Architectural
T Bars increasing in size, Lasting Energy.

The writing of the very industrious man may not be excessively angular, but may be termed semi angular, since very oval and rounded lines predominating would mean a more easy-going nature.

There is no uncertain wavering in the writing of the energetic man. He often makes triangular loops on such letters as y. Letters such as f and t will also be looped back in crossing.

The really industrious man keeps up his industry, day after day. He does not work in fits and starts. Consequently his letters are as large at the end of the word as at the beginning, as a rule, and the words in the last of his letter will be made as firmly as those in the first. His energy does not give out before he finishes.

Many energetic, businesslike people cut the letters like y and g off sharply below the line, showing their desire to eliminate unnecessary details and fussing.

Know Your Sweetheart by His Handwriting

By EDNA PURDY WALSH
Editor, Character Reading Magazine.

The Industrious Sweetheart
The truly industrious man does not believe in wasting much time. We do not expect, therefore, to see very large margins and much space wasted around words and between letters, yet the writing may not be cramped at all, to denote stinginess.

find it
Looped f's and t's, Energy.
Architectural
T Bars Increasing in Size, Lasting Energy.

The writing of the very industrious man may not be excessively angular, but may be termed semi angular, since very oval and rounded lines predominating would mean a more easy-going nature.

There is no uncertain wavering in the writing of the energetic man. He often makes triangular loops on such letters as y. Letters such as f and t will also be looped back in crossing.

The really industrious man keeps up his industry, day after day. He does not work in fits and starts. Consequently his letters are as large at the end of the word as at the beginning, as a rule, and the words in the last of his letter will be made as firmly as those in the first. His energy does not give out before he finishes.

Many energetic, businesslike people cut the letters like y and g off sharply below the line, showing their desire to eliminate unnecessary details and fussing.

BIBLE REMAINS GREATEST SELLER

Rev. Morris L. Eversz Upholds
Literary Supremacy of Bible

HAS SPOKEN EXCELLENCE

Six Literary Attacks Made Upon New Testament Have Failed,
Speaker Said

The third in the series of Sunday evening addresses on the Bible was given last evening at the Methodist church by Rev. Morris L. Eversz, on "The Literary Supremacy of the Bible." Lessing, the generator of modern German literature, defined the Bible as, "the record of the divine education of the race." As such it has a literary as well as a spoken excellence, Rev. Eversz stated. This supremacy rests on the Bible method of education, it being the education of the will.

Its adaptation to a world of active busy men, is so plain in its teaching that the wayfarer man need not err therein. The children take to the Bible early and its truth builds character. Its power to recreate the languages of the earth is seen in the half century following the translation into the King James version when English prose reached its stateliest form. It was the age of Shakespeare, Bacon, Latimer, Spencer and Raleigh who made such use of the Bible as to enshrine it forever in the English language. Luther's translation did the same for German literature.

Six great literary attacks have been made upon the New Testament all of which have failed. The first was Jewish. The orthodox leaders of Christ's time used their ancient literature against the Christian movement for 250 years and failed to stop it. The second was Hebraic. Philosophers poured their logic, satire, invective, scorn on the movement saying the miracles were wrought by an imaginary God. The third was Pantheistic. Spinoza of Holland was its sponsor stating that miracle were impossible because contrary to his ideas of God. Like Don Quixote's attack on the windmills, those theories have rolled in the dust.

The fourth was by Hume who held that miracles were impossible because contrary to experience but so was the telephone, telegraph and radio in Hume's day. The fifth was Rationalistic, by Paulus which claimed that Christ took advantage of circumstances his hearers knew nothing of. Instead of feeding the 5,000 out of the boy's lunch Christ had secret access to a rich man's bakery—but, Paulus, exeunt. The sixth was critical by Woolston and Strauss which were the most childish and silly of all, rejecting the Bible because it did not go into the most minute detail. All of these attacks have failed. The Bible is the best seller in all literature today.

In the last century 80 theories of the earth's geology have been propounded and are defunct but the Bible geology stands. The Bible begets a great literature because it undergirds the nations which accept it with a great moral life. Just as Jehovah breathed into the material Adam the breath of life and he became a living soul, so holy men of old wrote as they were moved by the spirit of God and they gave to the world the most compact little library of 66 books the world will ever see, the Holy Bible. The Bible is creating a living literature among the nations. For Americans the 1921 American standard revision is the most usable, accurate and inspiring of all versions, Rev. Eversz stated.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membrane and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

No visitors were allowed that day. A sequence of tremendous importance was being made for "The Rough Riders" at the Fair Grounds on the outskirts of San Antonio, Texas. Victor Fleming, Paramount director, gave orders that there were to be no interruptions.

It was the scene where Theodore Roosevelt and Leonard Wood receive a telegram from the War Department to entrain their troops on the first leg of the journey to the battlefields of Cuba.

Someone handed Fleming a note. It was from a young mother in behalf of her children, begging permission to see the filming, "because," it read, "I want my boys and girls to have an education in the fine, true side of American history and its great men."

"Open the gate," said Fleming, "and let every child in. We'll make a special place for them near the cameras."

Youngsters by the score flocked into the grounds, thrilled to the depths of their little hearts.

ber as yet unknown, and hundreds were injured here today when a storage tank of the Manchester Gas Works, owned by the Equitable Gas Co., exploded.

The bodies of 10 men, badly mangled, were taken to the morgue at 10 A. M. in trucks. All ambulances were being used to take the injured to the hospitals.

The explosion, which sent a ball of fire high into the air, was felt throughout Pittsburgh and many nearby boroughs.

The repercussion broke windows and damaged office buildings within several blocks' radius.

All hospitals near the scene of the disaster were filled with injured within a half hour after the explosion.

Older citizens likened the blast to that of the old arsenal which blew up years ago, killing and injuring many persons.

Robert Russell, one of the first to reach the scene of the blast, said he saw men, women and children bleeding from cuts and wounds as they were being taken away in automobiles.

"When the explosion occurred, the earth seemed to give way for a second," he said. "I looked down the street and saw a great mass of flames shooting into the air. The flames soon died into heavy smoke."

"As I drove down the street 30 to 40 automobiles passed me, taking the injured to hospitals. In the streets I saw many women and children running frantically in every direction. Many were bleeding about the face and hands."

"Within the immediate area of the explosion, roofs were torn from dwellings, windows were smashed and electric wires were dangling in the streets."

The tank which exploded was one of two giant storage tanks with a capacity of 5,000,000 cubic feet.

Water mains broke and flooded the streets, preventing rescue workers from penetrating the works where most of the dead and injured lay.

The body of an unidentified negro was taken to the morgue by police who reported that many had been killed, but rescue workers were having difficulty reaching them. The negro's body was found lying in the street in front of the plant.

Houses adjoining the plant were demolished. It was believed that many women and children had been caught in the wreckage of the houses. Flood water prevented a systematic search of the wrecked houses.

Company when the explosion caused part of the building to cave in.

The roof of the Damascus plant of the National Bronze & Metal Company collapsed and 100 men were reported buried beneath the ruins.

Officials of the gas company were unable to state how many men were at work in the plant. They placed the value of the exploded tank at $750,000.

Ninety-six men employed in the Pittsburgh-Gray Iron foundry, located 100 feet from the tank, were cut and bruised. A hundred workmen in the plant of the Pittsburgh Clay Pot Co. were reported trapped in the building. Flames from the gas plant were creeping upon them and a desperate rescue effort was being made.

The lower North Side, across the Allegheny river from the business section of Pittsburgh, was a devastated area.

Huge chunks of steel were thrown through roofs of houses, caved through building fronts, and fell on passing automobiles and street cars.

Mothers who had left their homes just before the blast to go to stores fought with police and firemen who endeavored to keep them from entering the danger zone. Screaming for their children, the mothers fought their way past police lines.

For hundreds of feet about the wrecked tank great pieces of steel lay half submerged in the water-covered streets. They had been twisted like paper by the force of the blast.

A network of twisted electric and telephone wires lay tangled in the debris-filled streets.

Electric wires operating fire alarm boxes on the North Side were thrown out of order and brought fear that fires in demolished houses might add to the catastrophe.

Thousands of persons surrounded the hospitals where the injured were treated, demanding that they be admitted to seek relatives and friends.

Police stood guard at the hospitals but they were unable to preserve order.

The crowds delayed removal of the victims from ambulances to the emergency rooms for treatment.

E. P. SCALLON'S ADDRESS ARMISTICE DAY

DECLARING that there is no short, easy road to permanent peace, Hon. Edward P. Scallon, of Crosby, representative at large in the state legislature, urged full use of the ballot in an Armistice day address at the Little Falls high school Friday morning.

By choosing for delegates and candidates and electing to office men of wisdom and power who can shape the country's course, the ordinary citizen during the coming year can do a wonderful work for peace, declared Mr. Scallon. His address has so many pertinent points, and suggests so much food for thought that we take the liberty of repeating it as it was published in the Little Falls Daily Transcript.

"The voice of the United States," said Mr. Scallon, "is only the collective voice of its people. If they remain silent on the problem of peace, how can America expect to go forward to achieve the promises of the first Armistice day?"

"For the veterans of the World war, Armistice day always will have deep personal significance. It is their very own holiday. They had a part in the events which made it and the sentiments which caused the day to be set aside for annual celebration had their origin in them.

"We remember clearly that first Armistice day, nine years ago when at 11 o'clock in the morning the blast of cannon, the chatter of machine guns and the crack of rifles ceased suddenly after more than four years of slaughter, and a large part of the world went wild with rejoicing. It was a wonderful day in the world's history, marking not only the end of the most horrible war humanity had ever endured but also the triumph of the principles of liberty and promise that there should never again be war between civilized nations.

"The all-consuming joy, the oversweeping emotion of the first Armistice day we cannot reproduce on its anniversary. That was a thing of the moment, a rush of relief from the strain and anguish of the years which had preceded it. But in our calmer celebration today, we have an opportunity to look with clearer vision at the significance which surrounds Armistice day.

"The great objectives of the World war which were sought to be gained in the crushing of the military power of the enemy and the signing of the Armistice were embodied in those two famous phrases, 'To make the world safe for democracy' and 'A war to end war.' These were the things that America was fighting for, the things for which the nation sacrificed and men died. This ninth anniversary of the Armistice is a fitting time on which to consider how the nation is going forward in the realization of these things.

"One of the facts which strikes a student of the American government is that hardly half of us Americans who are supposed to be governing ourselves, even go to the polls and vote. Only a small percentage makes any study of the problems of government and only a handful have any part in the councils of the political parties which frame policies and put forward the candidates.

"We are neglecting our government and the result is the same as if we neglected our businesses, our farms or our homes. Our government is just as good as the effort we put into it.

"An increasing distrust in the government is being evidenced among the people. Because a man is in office is almost taken as evidence that he is 'crooked.' Little faith is held in state legislatures, or even congress, to make the laws which will best benefit the country.

"This feeling of distrust is dangerous to democracy. It is threatening to shake the trust in the principles on which our government rests. People who do not have full confidence in their government are apt to be ready to listen to those who have schemes for other forms of rule. Conditions, brought about by lack of confidence, such as now exist, are harrowing the ground for seeds of radicalism which are being so industriously planted.

"Next year there will be a general election. If we want our government to be more truly representative of the people, now is the time to begin action. A larger percentage of the people must take an interest in the business of government, must use their intelligence on public questions and must express their wills in the conventions and selections of the coming year."

Mr. Scallon urged his hearers to study the issues involved in the next election, particularly the issues that involve world peace. He praised Colonel Lindbergh for conducting himself in such a way as to cement more closely the friendship between America and Europe.

BACK TO THE FARM MOVEMENT

ENLIGHTENMENT on the general consternation which has been expressed over the abandoned farm situation in America is obtainable in a survey made by the Department of Agriculture to determine just why farmers moved from country to town, says the Milaca Tribune editorially.

This survey shows that 84 per cent of the farmers who moved to towns between 1917 and 1926 owned their farms at the time the change was made. How large a percentage of these farms were mortgaged could not be determined, but the cause for departure may be classified in these general groups of reasons: Economic, 37.8 per cent; old age and physical disabilities, 25.2 per cent; opportunity to give children better schooling, 10.9 per cent; because of having achieved a competency, 2.5 per cent; in order to let son have farm, 1.8 per cent; all other reasons, 21.8 per cent.

Nearly 650,000 persons deserted their farms last year, and it is apparent that a census now would show a population of less than 25,000,000 whereas in 1910 the rural population was 32,000,000.

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, discussing this trend, sees in it a natural long time adjustment which need not operate to the disadvantage of agriculture, and in this view, he differs with many of the alarmists who see in the trek from the field to the city the certain ruin of the country. He is probably more nearly correct than the viewers-with-alarm, for after all the major concern is that we have adequate production, and not that so many millions of people be living the rural life.

With 37.5 per cent of the city-going farmers driven into towns for economic reasons, it is apparent that the farm situation is gradually adjusting itself.

While some farmers have been unable to do more than make both ends meet, others have made a good income, and the opportunity is now better than for some years.

The cities have been unable to absorb all those who thought that they preferred city life, and others have learned by experience that making a living in metropolitan occupations is not as easy as they had hoped, so there has been started a distinct back-to-the-farm movement.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

Charles V

A GOUTY old man sat in a monastery cell, surrounded by dozens of clocks and watches.

"I cannot even make two clocks tick in unison," he whined peevishly. "No wonder I failed to make millions of people think alike!"

The old clock fancier was Charles V, who had given up affairs of state at the age of fifty-six, and who was spending the two remaining years of his life in monastic retirement. He had had a half century of experiences such as lent a certain pathos to his complaint about the clocks. Born in 1500 to the greatest power ever inherited by mortal man, he had risen to heights reached by no other ruler of his century and had lived to see his most cherished plans fall to pieces.

Here are some of the titles that Charles felt he to, as a mere boy: the archduchy of Austria, the sovereignty of the Netherlands, the kingdoms of Spain, Sicily and Navarre, and the rulership of all Spain's American possessions. In addition to this, when only nineteen, he was chosen emperor of Germany, and at twenty-six was crowned king of Italy. He ruled four nations which had nothing in common and no ties of mutual interest. These facts, of course, led to endless rivalries, revolts and international complications.

Moreover, a throng of outside enemies rose against the young monarch. Francis I, king of France, who had been one of his competitors for the German crown, promptly declared war on him, seizing the duchies of Milan and Burgundy, which Charles regarded as his own. Soliman, the Magnificent (under whom, from 1520 to 1566, Turkey reached its pinnacle of greatness), invaded Hungary, advancing to the very walls of Vienna, and, with his fleets, held the Mediterranean, menacing Italy and Spain. The Netherlands, too, were ripe for revolt, while a furious revolution broke out in Spain.

Added to this, an Augustinian monk of Germany, Martin Luther, defied the pope, protested against certain tenets of the Catholic church and advanced a "reformed" creed. He drew to him thousands of Germans, his adherents becoming known as "Protestants." The security of the Catholic church, of which Charles was the acknowledged champion, was thus menaced. Altogether he had his hands full.

To beat back France's armies on the Flemish frontier and in Italy, to check the Turks on the Mediterranean and in his own duchy of Austria, to stem the tide of religious disagreements and to reconcile clashing political parties—this was the task before him. He entered on an eight-year war with France, during which he drove the French from Italy and captured King Francis. He forced a humiliating treaty on Francis. This the latter at once broke, but in a second war was again beaten.

Soliman led a great Turkish army over the German frontier and Charles advanced in person to meet him, and drove the Turks back to their own territory. Then Francis, forming an alliance with Soliman, again invaded Italy. But Charles opposed the allies so successfully that they were soon glad to sign a treaty of peace. The revolt in Spain was put down and the Netherlands for the time appeased, so Charles had at last time to attend to the Reformation, which, under Luther, Melancthon and other teachers, had by the time swept Germany from end to end. The emperor had crushed every military foe and had humiliated every royal rival; but here, in this new religious movement at home, he found an opponent he could not conquer—a power that thrived under persecution.

Council after council was held, scheme after scheme proposed. Compromises were suggested, but found favor with neither party. As if this one setback had undermined his whole edifice of greatness, so the failure of Charles in reconciling the religious sects was followed by a series of new disappointments and misfortunes. He had hoped to bequeath all his power and possessions to his son Philip, but to this the German electors would not agree. So he foresaw that on his death the mighty one-man empire he held would be split up as had those of Alexander and Charlemagne. To add to his worries, Henry II (son of Francis I) of France, backed by other rulers, invaded Germany and captured several important cities, notably Metz. Charles sought to recapture Metz, but failed, and until 1570 it remained in French hands.

Charles made one more throw of the dice against fate. He arranged a marriage between his son Philip and Queen Mary of England, thus forming an English alliance to strengthen his own power and that of the Catholic church. But the couple had no children to perpetuate the scheme.

His most cherished plans set at naught, his own subjects refusing to be guided by him in matters of religion, his health broken, his territory successfully invaded, his son debarred from inheriting his chief possessions—the combination was too much for the old emperor. He gave up his throne and left to others the helm of state which would no longer obey his feeble hand.

His was that saddest of fates: The fate of the man who outlives the greatness he himself had created.

Community Building

Permanent Value in Tree-Shaded Highway

If Missouri has been the last state to build her sector of a national highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, she can be the first to institute the refinement of shade trees along the highway, an improvement that, despite its youth, is winning for Ontario and Quebec, two of the Canadian provinces, the acclaim of every automobile tourist who visits them.

Why not begin in Missouri by shading the State highway from St. Louis to Kansas City? It would make Missouri unique among the states traversed by this great national avenue. We have a profusion of trees adaptable to such use. Some of the old pike roads in the state were made beautiful in this way with elms, oaks, sycamores, cottonwoods, blackberries, box elders, wild cherry, persimmon, sassafras, walnut, hickory, butternut and sugar maples. No one who has ever motored on these old highways in summer and known the grateful shade of their trees will ever forget them.

Indeed, it is this way that every highway in Missouri can be made lovely and in a practical sense peculiar to the state. The heat of the sun is an abomination to every motorist who has a fire to change, and how the shade of the roadside tree is everywhere sought for a noonday luncheon! Why not capitalize that well-known fact and make Missouri highways famous for shade?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Rough Brickwork Now Favored in Building

Brickwork is rapidly undergoing a radical change at the hands of the leading architects of the country, who are fast getting away from the old idea that in order to supply the very last touch in artistry it must present a surface as smoothly even and correct as if it had been molded. No longer is this the fashion, nor is it acceptable to the men who dictate architectural vogues.

Today the brickwork which catches quickest the public eye and the popular fancy must be very rough. And the brick themselves must be of the same order. The rougher the better. Clinker brick, which only a few years ago had no market at all, are now in high favor. The swelled brick, which had been developed particularly in the New England district, and the handmade brick of that section are two other prime favorites.

Comprehensive Nature

We cannot all find the same things in Nature. She is all things to all men. She is like the manna that came down from heaven. "He made manna to descend for them, in which were all manner of tastes; and every Israelite found in it what his palate was chiefly pleased with. If he desired fat in it, he had it. In it the young man tasted bread; the old man honey, and the children oil." But all men found in it substance and strength. So with Nature. In her are all manner of tastes, science, art, poetry, utility, and good in all. The botanist has one pleasure in her, the ornithologist another, the explorer another, the walker another, and the sportsman another; what all may have is the refreshment and the exhilaration which come from a loving and intelligent scrutiny of her manifold works.—John Burroughs.

Beauty Through Fencing

There is growing consciousness in the United States of the important part that correct fencing plays in successful beautifying of the home.

Fencing dignifies any establishment where it is utilized. In our records are many instances where installing fencing has given a property an added attractiveness that more than paid for the improvement. Fencing also permits improvements that would be impossible without it.

Formal plantings, the setting out of rare shrubs and plants that could not be accomplished if the locality were open to general traffic, become easy and safe when performed in the shelter of rigid, marauder-proof fencing.

Expert Advice for Builder

If you are planning to acquire a home of your own, plan also to take advantage of the expert counsel of a mortgage company.

Here you will find men trained in building and financing practices—men who know their field and who are always glad to talk over your problems.

They will explain the mortgage plan to you and show you how small monthly payments on your loan, covering principal and interest, completely wipe out your indebtedness in a little over ten years without the payment of fines, fees or premiums.—Exchange.

Housing and Health

Better housing is universally recognized as an essential of better public health. In practically every community in the United States, and in many foreign countries, energetic movements are on for the abolition of slum districts.

This the latter at once broke, but in a second war was again beaten.

Soliman led a great Turkish army over the German frontier and Charles advanced in person to meet him, and drove the Turks back to their own territory. Then Francis, forming an alliance with Soliman, again invaded Italy. But Charles opposed the allies so successfully that they were soon glad to sign a treaty of peace. The revolt in Spain was put down and the Netherlands for the time appeased, so Charles had at last time to attend to the Reformation, which, under Luther, Melancthon and other teachers, had by this time swept Germany from end to end. The emperor had crushed every military foe and had humiliated every royal rival; but here, in this new religious movement at home, he found an opponent he could not conquer—a power that thrived under persecution.

Council after council was held, scheme after scheme proposed. Compromises were suggested, but found favor with neither party. As if this one setback had undermined his whole edifice of greatness, so the failure of Charles in reconciling the religious sects was followed by a series of new disappointments and misfortunes. He had hoped to bequeath all his power and possessions to his son Philip, but to this the German electors would not agree. So he foresaw that on his death the mighty one-man empire he held would be split up as had those of Alexander and Charlemagne. To add to his worries, Henry II (son of Francis I) of France, backed by other rulers, invaded Germany and captured several important cities, notably Metz. Charles sought to recapture Metz, but failed, and until 1570 it remained in French hands.

Charles made one more throw of the dice against fate. He arranged a marriage between his son Philip and Queen Mary of England, thus forming an English alliance to strengthen his own power and that of the Catholic church. But the couple had no children to perpetuate the scheme.

His most cherished plans set at naught, his own subjects refusing to be guided by him in matters of religion, his health broken, his territory successfully invaded, his son debarred from inheriting his chief possessions—the combination was too much for the old emperor. He gave up his throne and left to others the helm of state which would no longer obey his enfeebled hand.

His was that saddest of fates: The fate of the man who outlives the greatness he himself had created.

Community Building

Permanent Value in Tree-Shaded Highway

If Missouri has been the last state to build her sector of a national highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, she can be the first to institute the refinement of shade trees along the highway, an improvement that, despite its youth, is winning for Ontario and Quebec, two of the Canadian provinces, the acclaim of every automobile tourist who visits them.

Why not begin in Missouri by shading the State highway from St. Louis to Kansas City? It would make Missouri unique among the states traversed by this great national avenue. We have a profusion of trees adaptable to such use. Some of the old pike roads in the state were made beautiful in this way with elms, oaks, sycamores, cottonwoods, blackberries, box elders, wild cherry, persimmon, sassafras, walnut, hickory, butternut and sugar maples. No one who has ever motored on these old highways in summer and known the grateful shade of their trees will ever forget them.

Indeed, it is this way that every highway in Missouri can be made lovely and in a practical sense peculiar to the state. The heat of the sun is an abomination to every motorist who has a tire to change, and how the shade of the roadside tree is everywhere sought for a noonday luncheon! Why not capitalize that well-known fact and make Missouri highways famous for shade?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Rough Brickwork Now

Favored in Building

Brickwork is rapidly undergoing a radical change at the hands of the leading architects of the country, who are fast getting away from the old idea that in order to supply the very last touch in artistry it must present a surface as smoothly even and correct as if it had been molded. No longer is this the fashion, nor is it acceptable to the men who dictate architectural vogues.

Today the brickwork which catches the quickest public eye and the popular fancy must be very rough. And the brick themselves must be of the same order. The rougher the better. Clinker brick, which only a few years ago had no market at all, are now in high favor. The swelled brick, which had been developed particularly in the New England district, and the handmade brick of that section are two other prime favorites.

Comprehensive Nature

We cannot all find the same things in Nature. She is all things to all men. She is like the manna that came down from heaven. "He made manna to descend for them, in which were all manner of tastes; and every Israelite found in it what his palate was chiefly pleased with. If he desired fat in it, he had it. In it the young men tasted bread; the old men honey, and the children oil." But all men found in it substance and strength. So with Nature. In her are all manner of tastes, science, art, poetry, utility, and good in all. The botanist has one pleasure in her, the ornithologist another, the explorer another, the walker another, and the sportsman another; what all may have is the refreshment and the exhilaration which come from a loving and intelligent scrutiny of her manifold works.—John Burroughs.

Beauty Through Fencing

There is growing consciousness in the United States of the important part that correct fencing plays in successful beautifying of the home.

Fencing dignifies any establishment where it is utilized. In our records are many instances where installing fencing has given a property an added attractiveness that more than paid for the improvement. Fencing also permits improvements that would be impossible without it.

Formal plantings, the setting out of rare shrubs and plants that could not be accomplished if the locality were open to general traffic, become easy and safe when performed in the shelter of rigid, marauder-proof fencing.

Expert Advice for Builder

If you are planning to acquire a home of your own, plan also to take advantage of the expert counsel of a mortgage company.

Here you will find men trained in building and financing practices—men who know their field and who are always glad to talk over your problems.

They will explain the mortgage plan to you and show you how small monthly payments on your loan, covering principal and interest, completely wipe out your indebtedness in a little over ten years without the payment of fines, fees or premiums.—Exchange.

Housing and Health

Better housing is universally recognized as an essential of better public health. In practically every community in the United States, and in many foreign countries, energetic movements are on for the abolition of slum districts.

Enter: the baby!

Accompanied by his faithful stork, the Bitner baby arrived this morning. There was a great deal of rushing around, but things have quieted down now, and advice is pouring in!

Counselors, well-meaning and many, have arisen: "I used this talcum and that soap," "those bottles are best," and "Blank's have the best carriages." But behind these advices looms the most practical, most modern and most economical counselor of them all: advertising.

Advertising will tell Mrs. Bitner not only which talcum, which blankets, which carriages are best, but it will also give her many helpful hints on keeping her baby healthy and happy. It will suggest toys for his busy hands, shoes for his scampering feet, clothes and foods for his sturdy body, as well as books to set his eager mind to work. And, as the years go by, Mrs. Bitner will keep young, and look young too. For advertising will help her solve one of the greatest economic problems of her home—buying the best for her family at the best prices.

MINNESOTA AND ILLINOIS FIGHT FOR CHAMPIONSHIP HONOR

BOTH TIED BY TEAMS WHICH WERE DEFEATED

2 MIDWEST TEAMS REMAIN IN RACE OF WESTERN CONFERENCE

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Two Big Ten teams, both tied by teams which have been defeated, remained in the race for the western conference championship today.

One, Illinois, has a slight advantage because its tie game does not mar its conference record, the tie having been played with Iowa State.

The other, Minnesota, was held to a tie by Indiana.

Each team has one conference game to play. Illinois would appear to have the edge, because it does not meet as strong an opponent in Ohio State as Minnesota meets in Michigan.

Barring accidents, the Illini should win from Ohio and show a clean record for the season.

However, Minnesota by defeating Michigan—an even money bet—would yet win the title if the Buckeyes should show another form reversal and down Illinois.

Last Saturday Michigan had an easy time winning from the Navy, 27-12. Minnesota had an easier time winning from Drake, 27-6.

A distinct upset in Saturday's games was turned in by Iowa. The Hawkeyes, after losing ten straight conference games in two seasons, defeated Wisconsin, 16-0.

The Badgers had been considered at least 15 points the better team.

Illinois won from Chicago, 15-6, apparently principally because of the absence of Ken Rouse, star Chicago center.

This seems to have been Illinois' year. The team met Northwestern when the Evanstonians were in their worst shape of the year, at least had a dozen regulars being out with injuries.

When Michigan played Illinois, it was without the services of one of two star players. It was admitted that the Illini would have had a hard time winning from Chicago with Rouse in the game. As it was Zupke's men concentrated their offense through the line—and won.

Indiana had little trouble winning from a crippled Northwestern team, 18-7.

Ohio State swamped Dennison, 61-6.

Purdue defeated Franklin, 46-0.

The defeat of Notre Dame by the Army left the middle west without a claimant to the mythical national title. The Irish previously had been tied by Minnesota.

Almquist of Minnesota continued to lead the scorers with eleven touchdowns and eight points after touchdown, for a total of 74. Gilbert, Michigan, was second, with 63 points and Lewis, Northwestern, third, with 34 points.

HUSKERS REPRESENTED FROM 10 STATES, AT WALTER SPRINGER'S FARM

Winnebago, Minn., Nov. 14.—(UP)—Twenty cornhuskers—representing ten mid-western states, today scanned the skies and weather reports and predicted what they could do if it snowed or remained clear, as they awaited the opening gun of the National Cornhusking Tournament to be held on a farm near here Tuesday.

When the gun is fired, the huskers who came to the national meet by virtue of their speed in corn husking in home state fields, will start down the rows on Walter Springer's farm, and for eighty minutes they will "keep one in the air" until the final gun. The loads will be weighed, deductions for shuck ribbons made, and the winner announced.

Then will come the speaking program dinner, and several Minnesota orchestras are prepared to furnish music for the dance to follow. Gov. Theodore Christianson will address the corn throwers.

Represented in the meet are the following states: Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

Whether Fred Stanek, Webster City, Ia., farmer, and winner of last year's meet will be present at tomorrow's event was not known.

GOPHERS MUST BE AT TOP SPEED TO BEAT WOLVERINES

MINNESOTA, ILLINOIS AND PURDUE CAME THROUGH AS CRITICS PREDICTED

IOWA SPRUNG GREATEST SURPRISE BY DEFEATING THE BADGERS, 16-0

In the closing games of the football season in the Big Ten games the usual happenings of the "unexpected" happened, but Minnesota, Illinois and Purdue acted as the critics predicted, Paul M. Jones writes today.

Illini continued towards the western conference championship by defeating the Chicago eleven, 15-6. Illini outplayed the Maroons more than then the score indicates, but in justice to Stagg and his tribe, it must be noted that his team, like many others, had been so badly injured, that it was impossible for him to place a team in the field equal to the task of defeating the "Suckers."

Two or three times the Maroons held the upstate team in the shadow of the goal posts, so outside of the Michigan game has the Illini eleven showed any marked degree of superiority. While they are pointing severely at Minnesota's tie game with disgust, it wouldn't be a bad idea to impress upon Illini that she has a tie game with Ames of the Missouri Valley Conference, but because out of the Big Ten circles, saves her from much criticism. But, in reality, it is more of a "black eye" than the Minnesota-Indiana tie at the opening of the season for the Gophers.

Iowa sprung the biggest surprise of the season by defeating Wisconsin on the Badger field, 16-0, after the Iowans had lost ten consecutive Big Ten games, and it meant the last effort of Coach Ingwersen to retain his position as coach of the Hawkeyes in the future. The Badgers have had good material for the past ten years, but have lost out because of the coaching. The present staff looks good on paper but that does not make winners. There are so many stars in the staff that it is probably a case of over-efficiency and not much in class. Indiana, the out there with his face all done up in tape and the hands and legs of many of the other veterans showed Northwestern on the latter's lot, 18-7, but it was simply another case as of Chicago's, of injuries weakening the team so, even though the coach was compelled to play some of the injured. The "Wildcats," as the Northwestern boys are known on the gridiron, fought pluckily against those odds to the end and made an impressive showing under adverse conditions. Purdue defeated Franklin 54-0, but no one more than Purdue needed the rest, after their strenuous schedule, for a light opponent. Not much credit is due the former for its impressive score.

Michigan, the next Gopher enemy, defeated the strong Navy team 27-12, revenging their defeat of a year ago in the east of 10-0. While Michigan's score was more impressive than that, both teams were entirely different in line-ups. The Navy had lost one or two stars through graduation, while the Wolverines lost Friedman, the mainstay of the past years' Wolverine teams, though Gilbert was filling the vacancy in my estimation better than "Benny" did in all departments of the game. The Wolverines showed a great development in team-play, and though the third consecutive hard game, showed no signs of weakening under the strain of the battles. The prestige of the west was retained somewhat from the lowering other Big Ten teams had set the Conference teams back, by losses in intersectional combats, and surely the Seaman were a better foe than the others had met, so that the marked superiority of Michigan counted for more in its triumph.

The Gophers closed their season on the home field by defeating the Drake team of the Missouri Valley Conference with the aid of the first, second and third team combinations, 27-6, playing the latter part of the melee with but Barnhart in of the regulars. I thought the first team played listless ball. I am sure the last three hard games with Iowa, Wisconsin and Notre Dame absorbed

A MATTER OF RECORDS

The annual national convention of the Amateur Athletic Union at Cincinnati next week will be asked to approve the world's record of 41 seconds or the 440-yard relay, established by a quartet wearing the colors of the Newark Athletic Club last July.

This invites attention to the strength of the United States in the sprint and relay events which will be an important part of the track and field program of the IX Olympiad at Amsterdam next summer.

At Lincoln, Nebraska, where the national championships of the A. A. U. were held, no fewer than four different teams broke the record for the 440-yard relay before the Newark A. C. flyers finally set the time at 41 flat.

The New York A. C. relay team, Michigan State's quartet, and four flyers headed by Charley Paddock and representing the Los Angeles A. C., all bettered the mark established in 1925.

Charley Paddock, incidentally, declined to participate in any individual events. The "Fastest Human" is sensitive about his performances on the cinders.

One would imagine that Charley, who has been about a bit and has traveled to two Olympiads as well as having posed, by request, with California bathing beauties, would be calloused and rather hard-boiled about his track honors. But Paddock simply does not like to be beaten, and until recently he had refused to leave the Pacific Coast.

Now Charley has hinted that he will go East this winter and participate indoors, if a 100-yard straightaway can be found to suit his purpose. There are two reasons for Paddock's decision, probably. One is his confidence that he can erase from the books certain records now credited to Bob McAllister, the "Flying Cep." The other is that next year the Olympic Games will be with us once more, and then will come Charley's last chance, if he makes the American team, to win world sprint laurels.

By 1932, the youngster will certainly have crowded the "Fastest Human" off the cinders.

America's strength in the sprints, as demonstrated at Lincoln last July, was by no means confined to the relay events.

Consider the fact that six runners finished within a stride in the finale of the 100-yard dash at the A. A. U. senior national championships, and that the winner's time was 9 3-5 seconds. This means that the five others were no slower than 9 4-5.

Chet Bowman of the Newark A. C., former Syracuse flyer and football star, won that race, beating Charley Borah of Hollywood, Roland Locke, Nebraska, Jackson Scholz, New York A. C., Henry Cummings of Newark, and Frank Hussey, N. Y. A. C., in the order named.

And a medium sized Indian blanket would have covered the sextet.

Other nations may be anticipating the coming of the Olympic Games with more elaborate preparations than the United States, but none of them can produce sprinters of that caliber—nor can all of them put together.

The indoor meets this winter may produce some new stars, although the athletic armament has been pretty thoroughly charted for the time being. The A. A. U. national indoor track and field championships, incidentally, will be held at Madison Square Garden, New York City.

GEORGE E. SPEARS AT RANSFORD BILLIARD PARLORS TONIGHT

Brainerd green cloth fans will be afforded a rare treat tonight at the Ransford billiard parlors when Geo. E. Spears, world's champion straight rail billiard player, will appear in a 200-point exhibition game.

Spears offers odds of 100 or no count to all comers and is holder of the world's record high run of 5,911 at straight rail billiards.

After the match game, Spears will give a lecture on how to play billiards and will also exhibit over 100 fancy billiard and pool shots.

GOPHERS MUST BE AT TOP SPEED TO BEAT WOLVERINES

MINNESOTA, ILLINOIS AND PURDUE CAME THROUGH AS CRITICS PREDICTED

IOWA SPRUNG GREATEST SURPRISE BY DEFEATING THE BADGERS, 16-0

In the closing games of the football season in the Big Ten games the usual happenings of the "unexpected" happened, but Minnesota, Illinois and Purdue acted as the critics predicted, Paul M. Jones writes today.

Illini continued towards the western conference championship by defeating the Chicago eleven, 15-6. Illini outplayed the Maroons more than then the score indicates, but in justice to Stagg and his tribe, it must be noted that his team, like many others, had been so badly injured, that it was impossible for him to place a team in the field equal to the task of defeating the "Suckers."

Two or three times the Maroons held the upstate team in the shadow of the goal posts, so outside of the Michigan game has the Illini eleven showed any marked degree of superiority. While they are pointing severely at Minnesota's tie game with disgust, it wouldn't be a bad idea to impress upon Illini that she has a tie game with Ames of the Missouri Valley Conference, but because out of the Big Ten circles, saves her from much criticism. But, in reality, it is more of a "black eye" than the Minnesota-Indiana tie at the opening of the season for the Gophers.

Iowa sprung the biggest surprise of the season by defeating Wisconsin on the Badger field, 16-0, after the Iowans had lost ten consecutive Big Ten games, and it meant the last effort of Coach Ingwerson to retain his position as coach of the Hawkeyes in the future. The Badgers have had good material for the past ten years, but have lost out because of the coaching. The present staff looks good on paper but that does not make winners. There are so many stars in the staff that it is probably a case of over-efficiency and not much in class. Indiana, the thorn in Gopher supremacy with Illini for the western title, defeated Northwestern on the latter's lot, 18-7, but it was simply another case as of Chicago's, of injuries weakening the team so, even though the coach was compelled to play some of the injured. The "Wildcats," as the Northwestern boys are known on the gridiron, fought pluckily against those odds to the end and made an impressive showing under adverse conditions. Purdue defeated Franklin 54-0, but no one more than Purdue needed the rest, after their strenuous schedule, for a light opponent. Not much credit is due the former for its impressive score.

Michigan, the next Gopher enemy, defeated the strong Navy team 27-12, revenging their defeat of a year ago in the east of 10-0. While Michigan's score was more impressive than that, both teams were entirely different in line-ups. The Navy had lost one or two stars through graduation, while the Wolverines lost Friedman, the mainstay of the past years' Wolverine teams, though Gilbert was filling the vacancy in his estimation better than "Benny" did in all departments of the game. The Wolverines showed a great development in team-play, and though the third consecutive hard game, showed no signs of weakening under the strain of the battles. The prestige of the west was retained somewhat from the lowering other Big Ten teams had set the Conference teams back, by losses in intersectional combats, and surely the Seaman were a better foe than the others had met, so that the marked superiority of Michigan counted for more in its triumph.

The Gophers closed their season on the home field by defeating the Drake team of the Missouri Valley Conference with the aid of the first, second and third team combinations, 27-6, playing the latter part of the melee with but Barnhart in of the regulars. I thought the first team played listless ball. I am sure the last three hard games with Iowa, Wisconsin and Notre Dame absorbed much of their vitality. Also the team physically is not in the best of condition. Gary looked like a ghost out there with his face all done up in tape and the hands and legs of many of the other veterans showed plainly that they were either just returning from the injured list or a new injury obtained. Drake had a good team and a heavy one, and while not classy enough to stand along with the first team, showed a marked superiority when the original players were removed from the Gopher eleven. Their passing and kicking was very good but their plays did not run off with smooth-like precision, as football plays must to be effective. Drake showed signs of their hard schedule, and if anywhere near successful against their superior opponents, should be satisfied. Amongst their tougher foes are but Minnesota, Notre Dame and California in succession. Some "set up!"

The Gophers have but three days to prepare the final touches for their

A MATTER OF RECORDS

The annual national convention of the Amateur Athletic Union at Cincinnati next week will be asked to approve the world's record of 41 seconds for the 440-yard relay, established by a quartet wearing the colors of the Newark Athletic Club last July.

This invites attention to the strength of the United States in the sprint and relay events which will be an important part of the track and field program of the IX Olympiad at Amsterdam next summer.

At Lincoln, Nebraska, where the national championships of the A. A. U. were held, no fewer than four different teams broke the record for the 440-yard relay before the Newark A. C. flyers finally set the time at 41 flat.

The New York A. C. relay team, Michigan State's quartet, and four flyers headed by Charley Paddock and representing the Los Angeles A. C., all bettered the mark established in 1925.

Charley Paddock, incidentally, declined to participate in any individual events. The "Fastest Human" is sensitive about his performances on the cinders.

One would imagine that Charley, who has been about a bit and has traveled to two Olympiads as well as having posed, by request, with California bathing beauties, would be calloused and rather hard-boiled about his track honors. But Paddock simply does not like to be beaten, and until recently he had refused to leave the Pacific Coast.

Now Charley has hinted that he will go East this winter and participate indoors, if a 100-yard straightaway can be found to suit his purpose. There are two reasons for Paddock's decision, probably. One is his confidence that he can erase from the books certain records now credited to Bob McAllister, the "Flying Cop." The other is that next year the Olympic Games will be with us once more, and then will come Charley's last chance, if he makes the American team, to win world sprint laurels.

By 1932, the youngster will certainly have crowded the "Fastest Human" off the cinders.

America's strength in the sprints, as demonstrated at Lincoln last July, was by no means confined to the relay events.

Consider the fact that six runners finished within a stride in the finals of the 100-yard dash at the A. A. U. senior national championships, and that the winner's time was 9 3-5 seconds. This means that the five others were no slower than 9 4-5.

Chet Bowman of the Newark A. C., former Syracuse flyer and football star, won that race, beating Charley Borah of Hollywood, Roland Locke, Nebraska, Jackson Scholz, New York A. C., Henry Cummings of Newark, and Frank Hussey, N. Y. A. C., in the order named.

And a medium sized Indian blanket would have covered the sextet.

Other nations may be anticipating the coming of the Olympic Games with more elaborate preparations than the United States, but none of them can produce sprinters of that caliber—nor can all of them put together.

The indoor meets this winter may produce some new stars, although the athletic firmament has been pretty thoroughly charted for the time being. The A. A. U. national indoor track and field championships, incidentally, will be held at Madison Square Garden, New York City.

"HEADS-UP" FOOTBALL PLAYED THIS SEASON

KNUTE ROCKNE'S OWN TEAM
FORGOT IT IN ARMY
GAME

THEN WENT THE WAY OF ALL
PROUD GRIDIRON
FLESH

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, Nov. 14.—What Knute Rockne calls "heads-up" football is what they are playing off on this season.

Knute's own team forgot it in the army game and went the way of all proud gridiron flesh this topsy-turvy year.

One reason Yale stands out as the best team in the east is that those six foot babies in eli blue play alert "heads-up" football, and now they are pleading with "Tad" to remain in charge of football affairs at New Haven.

Yale has been outclassed, but not outsmarted this year. If ever a football team was a whipped and doleful lot of youngsters, it was the big and badly battered Blue team at the start of the fourth period of the Princeton game.

Still, the team had been trained to "heads-up" football, so it had a chance although it didn't know it.

Johnny Hoben, who is rather an anomaly in a Yale uniform because he is actually a brainy quarterback, thought out the place that gave his team its chance. He called for a play so complicated and daring that twice his team-mates were confused as to how it went and had to call for "signals over."

Hoben, from midfield, flung a forward pass that seemed to be headed for an unguarded, unoccupied patch of turf. Dwight Fishwick, most alert of the Yale ends, crossed over and snatched the ball just before it struck the ground.

Princeton was not alert. The secondary defense was caught, for the moment, without its heads up, and Fishwick ran for a touchdown which meant the game.

A few moments after that, Fishwick fell upon a Tiger fumble behind the Princeton goal line, for what would have been another touchdown if several players had not been offside.

And a minute or two later, Dud Charlesworth, who of all the mighty men in Blue had his head highest and his eyes most widely open, plunked his 200 pounds upon a second Princeton fumble.

It was the alertness of Dwight Fishwick in shifting through to block Baruch's attempted drop kick for a point after touchdown which paved the Yale's margin of victory.

Yale was outclassed by Princeton in several departments of play, but won by playing "heads-up" football.

annual battle with Michigan at Ann Arbor. Whatever has been the outlook as to the Gophers' chances to date, they will have to play as well as they did against the Irish to conquer the Wolverines. Michigan lost early in the season but to Illinois, and have come along so fast since that it looks like a big man's task to displace the Michigan team and bring back the historical "Brown Jug" that was made famous after the tie game between the two schools in 1903 which ended 6-6. Yost's trainer left the jug, which was but a water bucket for the players, and the Minnesota trainer conceived the idea of using it as a trophy and returning it every year to the winner. It was in 1919 when the Gophers last won the jug back and then Oss led them to a healthy victory, 34-6, at Ann Arbor. I can only hope that Spears has led his men in such a way that their mental attitude is right, bruises gone and plays of the "Keller" fashion extraordinary, for upon that great day, November 19, in the new Michigan stadium before 80,000 to 90,000 football rooters, I want the Gopher eleven to stand out as a truly great eleven and a new criterion for future conference elevens to shoot at. I want the Minnesota boys to reach the goal the various critics picked them to reach and in such a way that the Illini or any other team can look askance at their record. Minnesota, I feel, is a powerful team and has yet to play the really great game that is in them to display. Can it be played Saturday, at Michigan, and the return of the Brown Jug? Such a team! Such a record! Get the Jug! May the best team win!

ANOTHER TASTE OF WINTRY WEATHER

(By United Press)
Another taste of wintry weather, with temperatures as low as those last week, was in store for Minnesota, the weather bureau predicted.

Snow and colder temperatures for the state Tuesday were predicted. The mercury probably will go as low as 15 degrees above zero at St. Paul, with lower temperatures predicted for the northern parts of the state.

Thermometer, on a downward path in several sections of the northwest today, dropped nearly to zero early today.

Building for Tomorrow

The name of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has gathered meaning with the years.

Today it is more than just the title of a big organization. It has come to be a synonym for service. It has come to stand for certain definite things—for dependable quality—for fair prices and fair dealing—for courtesy and friendliness.

Throughout the length and breadth of more than six hundred thousand square miles of territory this name is known and liked and depended upon.

It has taken years for the name of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to acquire its present significance in ten great states.

Good reputations are quickly shattered but slowly built. The mere rumor that a thing is bad is immediately broadcast, but it must be proved good before the news is spread.

The reputation which the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) enjoys today is the achievement of painstaking effort and uncompromising standards over a long period of years.

Every employee of the 29,000 has had to go about his work with loyalty and earnestness and thoughtfulness for others. Every gallon of the millions sold by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has had to measure up to the standards it has set. Every quart of lubricating oil sold anywhere at any time in all its territory has had to "live up" to its reputation for excellence.

In building the kind of reputation for dependability which this Company has attained there can be no slip-up—anywhere—anytime—even in the smallest detail. Courtesy must be unfailing. Quality must be unvarying.

The present reputation of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is the result of yesterday's building. Tomorrow it will be held responsible for the deeds of today and future demands for its service will depend upon its present capacity to serve.

The primary interest of this Company is the service its products give, rather than the sale of the products.

It would not be profitable for this Company to concern itself primarily with profits—to be interested only in sales. The sales and the profits of the future will be in proportion to the satisfaction given by its products and its service in the past.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is not a one-generation business. Its work is too deeply rooted in human need. It has a larger perspective. Behind it stretches a past of which it is justly proud—before it a future for which it is building today a foundation of service deep, enduring and permanent.

THREE FIRES BREAK OUT OVER WEEK-END

Greatest Damage Was Done to Bath House at 416 12th Street, Southeast

WAS COMPLETE LOSS

Roof Burned at 424 K. Street; Chimney Fire Saturday at St. Francis Parsonage

Three fires broke out in Brainerd over the week end as residents put more fuel in furnaces and stoves for protection against the snappy cold weather.

The fire department was called out to a chimney fire Saturday evening at 6:40 o'clock at the St. Francis parsonage, 411 North 9th street. There was no damage.

At 6:46 a. m. yesterday fire completely destroyed the bath house at 416 12th street S. E., owned by Jack Lahtila. The total amount of damage is unknown as yet.

A roof burned in the residence at 424 K. street at 5:13 a. m. today. Considerable damage was done.

MYRA CONNER IS CLUB SOLOIST

Sings at Brainerd Musical Club on Saturday After-noon

VOICE IS PLEASING

Shows Careful Training, Sureness of Pitch, Sweetness of Tone

(Contributed)

A well-filled hall greeted the soloist, Myra Conner, at the first regular meeting of the Musical club on Saturday. Before Mrs. Conner appeared, the new president, Mrs. John J. Cummins, welcomed the members in the name of the officers of the club, with especially warm greetings for the out-of-town and the new members.

Mrs. Cummins also announced the social tea to be given next Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Chamber of Commerce parlors, at which brief reports will be given of the year's work.

The artists appearance was pleasing and her voice, in her first group, showed careful training, sureness of pitch and sweetness of tone. But she didn't arouse the enthusiasm of her audience in this first group of classics. That came from her singing of "Care Nemo," from Verdi's "Rigoletto," the aria made famous by Galli-Curci. This brought forth the American equivalent of "bravo," and a demand for an encore, which was graciously responded to by the singing of "In the Time of Roses."

Her third group consisted of quaint English songs—one of them, by an unknown author, dating from the 16th century. This was particularly charming and interesting as its vocalization was more varied and difficult than most of the songs of that period.

Two numbers of the last group deserve special mention. "The Second Minute," by E. Maurice Besly, in which Grandpapa danced with Grandmamma, was so well done that the audience was able to visualize the sly love-making that was carried on through the stately measures of the graceful minuet.

The other number made the fairies very real to both the children and the "children older grown" in the audience, as they listened to Liza Lehman's "There are Fairies at the Bottom of our Garden." The last number of this group, "Take Joy Home," by Carolyn Wells Bassett, again brought out the power and fullness of Mrs. Conner's voice. The enthusiasm of the audience for this group was rewarded by the clever "April Fool Song."

The audience was also delighted to recognize an old favorite in the accompanist, Miss Delphie Lindstrom. Miss Lindstrom has been in Brainerd twice before in the same capacity and she will always be welcome, whether in the capacity of soloist or accompanist. On one occasion, she demonstrated her ability as a soloist but she is now giving her entire time to the difficult art of accompanying.

TOWERS DENIES BEING MANAGER

Says He Has Nothing to do With Campaign of E. C. Baumann for Governor

KNOWS LATTER SLIGHTLY

Denies Writing or Uttering Statements of Gubernatorial Candidacy

The Brainerd Dispatch calls attention to a letter in its columns, written by Robert Towers, of 402 Southeast 13th street, in which he denies that he is campaign manager for E. C. Baumann. Mr. Baumann gained publicity in Duluth and Twin Cities papers with an announcement concerning Baumann's candidacy for the governorship and giving his platform.

Mr. Towers says that some ten years ago he worked on the scrap dock of the Northern Pacific railway shops with Baumann. He knew him but casually at that time, he said. Since then he had not seen Baumann, he says, until Baumann returned to Brainerd about a month ago, and established a mission at 1310 East Maple street.

Mr. Towers denies making any statements whatever, by writing or otherwise, regarding the candidacy of Baumann for governor or previously saying or writing anything about Baumann.

SYNOPSIS

Hurricane Haley, skipper of the sailing schooner "Sea Sprite," is trying to find in Frisco something to make up for his years among the ice floes. He comes to Crawley's Riverside, and falls hard for the little dancer there. His mate joins him there, and made bold to drink offers to match his skipper for the girl. The crowd crowds Haley to do so, but he catches Brady cheating, and knocks him down. Brady sinks away, and Hurricane meets Polly and is immediately captured. Someone both of them seem to feel that they are meeting something quite new and strange.

"What else could I do?" she asked, "an I certainly can't cook." Her wistful smile as she said that, swept away the last of the many barriers that were between them, and Hurricane began to pour out his thoughts to one who he guessed was as lonely as he.

"Gee, kid, I'll bet you'd go wild over some of the things I've seen. Hurricane leant over and took her hand; Polly smiled at him and let it stay. "I'll never forget the time I saw the sun setting over a volcano in Hawaii. It was glorious, the natives used to worship there, and as I stood watching all those misty colors swirling about and changing like the colors on a bird's wing, I guess that I worshipped too."

"Oh, how I would," softly breathed the girl. "I love those islands, Polly. Fellows have told me that years there make you forget all else. Perhaps I believe them, but to me they seemed like the last things that God made. You know, after he had done all the rest. They're so perfect, everything is so complete, and the contact with her and the fact that she obviously enjoyed his company.

A bell rang and the hoarse voice of Crawley announced, "The next show will go on in ten minutes. Keep your seats, gentlemen." Hurricane watched through it all, and at the end Polly tripped back to him, nor did she need any urging from Crawley.

Hurricane had had time to think, and he had decided that in Polly was the answer to all his needs. With characteristic decisiveness he greeted her.

"Polly, what would you say if I asked you to come away with me? Marry me, and go and see these places that you ought to know?" For the first time in her life Polly flushed, and as the crimson motioned over her throat and face, Hurricane thought her lovely.

"It ain't fair to kid like that," she burst out. "I'd give my soul to be really happy and to do as I wanted. Maybe for someone I loved. But I guess I just got to dance." Crawley was watching from a point of vantage, and when a waiter informed him that the man with Polly was not drinking he frowned. No progress was being made. The hour was growing late and he could not let him get away with that money. If the damn fool would not get drunk—there was always the room upstairs. He motioned to Blonde Bessie, who was drinking with two tipsy Lascars, and then told her to join Polly.

Bessie saw that something was in the wind, and she went to the table in time to prevent Hurricane from telling Polly all the things that were on the tip of his tongue. Later Crawley himself joined the

"She didn't dance, she kind of floated."

the people that live there are so happy."

"Did you ever see any dancers there?" asked Polly. "Why yes I did," and Hurricane smiled as he looked at her. "I thought of them when I first saw you. As I remember it, it was the feast on the marriage night of the son of the chief of one of the smaller islands. The moon was high up in a sky that was full of stars, more than you see here. And there on the beach, on sands that glistened like silver in the moonlight, the girl and her two sisters danced a kind of thanksgiving dance.

"I have never seen anyone so happy as that girl. She didn't dance, just like you, kid, she kind of floated. As light and airy as the wind that rustled in the palm trees, as graceful as the tiny waves that came lapping up on the beach. And how that boy watched her. He must have loved her a lot, and when the dance was over she flew into his arms like a seabird darting over a wave. I was drunk. I usually was in those days, but somehow that sobered me, an' I felt kinda as if I'd been watching something I shouldn't have seen. Same as I did when I watched you, Polly."

"Oh, Hell, anyone can watch me dance," and there was bitterness in the girl's voice. "I've danced for sailors, chinks—don't see why anyone should feel that way about me."

"Don't say that, Polly," Hurricane hurried to comfort her. "I guess that it don't matter what you've done, long as you want to do the thing you're doing with yer whole heart. I tell you, Polly, you dance like she did, an' I wonder, kid, do yer think that yer'd ever dance for me? Just for me, yer know?"

"I guess yer kidding me," sighed Polly. "You ain't known me more than an hour an' I don't even know your name. When folks have done talking about me, then perhaps you won't be so eager."

The Riverside was filled up with loud voices, vulgar oaths; blinding smoke was all about her, swirling in a haze to the rim of the gallery and the chimera of corpse faces that leaned over the rail. But Polly saw nothing but a big brown man who was painting beautiful pictures for her.

"Polly, you're the first one in a long while who has asked me a name. Most people find that Hurricane will do an' that it kind of suits me best, but I was christened Peter Haley, an' if you want to call me that, gee, kid, but I'd sure like you to." Hurricane was flushed at three and the party was now four. The proprietor of the Riverside was now the genial host, insistent upon buying drinks and very proud of his honored guest. He spoke of the sea, told of his adventures, of ships and storms, and then remembered a celebrated harpoon that he kept upstairs. Nothing would do but he must show it to Hurricane. Polly knew what the room "Upstairs" meant.

It was the room where Crawley did his rough stuff. Cards, drugs, an assault, anything that suited the occasion. But it always meant the robbing of a victim. It was not a new idea to the Riverside. In fact no one on the inside questioned the ethics of such an act. Strangers in a seaport town are legitimate prey, and in any case they squandered their money somewhere before they started a cruise, and why not at the Riverside? One place was as good as another to leave it in.

It was perfectly safe, for the victim invariably remembered little when he woke up with aching head and empty pockets. Polly knew all this, also the tricks employed. In her short stay at the Riverside she had played a part in several such episodes, and had it been one of the thick-lipped brutes, boasting of their crimes and their women, she would probably have shrugged her shoulders in this case.

But this man was clean. He was something different. He represented something fine and noble. A breath of fresh air that had been suddenly fanned into her drab life. No—she couldn't do it. Polly had been thinking quickly while Bessie and Crawley had been bawling Hurricane. Turning to him she asked:

"Well, I thought you wanted to take me home?"

Hurricane had been trying to summon enough courage to ask her, and at her offer leapt to his feet.

"Sure thing. Ready to go? Do you change here or at home?"

"Guess I'll change at home tonight. Won't be a minute," and she darted away.

Crawley was thunderstruck, and could hardly refrain from shouting as she thought how her rival had blundered. No one had ever crossed "elbows" with Hurricane before, and lived to enjoy it. When Polly returned she grabbed Hurricane and hurried him out, before anyone could say anything one way or another.

"See you soon again," shouted Hurricane.

"Sure, drop in," growled Crawley.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(By Dodd, Mead & Company.)

The Borgias

THREE people sat in an upper room of a gorgeous Roman palace one night in 1492. The eldest of the trio was a singularly beautiful woman of perhaps forty. She was Rosa Vanozzi, the fairest Italian of her day. The room's two other occupants were her son and daughter, Cesare and Lucrezia Borgia. They were awaiting the signal that should announce the election of Rodrigo Borgia, father of Cesare and Lucrezia, as pope.

Italy, in the fifteenth century, was split up into numerous petty kingdoms, principalities and duchies, more or less independent of one another, yet all subject to the spiritual authority of Rome. The pope, too, held vast possessions, territories and armed forces. There was little coalition throughout central and eastern Europe. Italy and Germany were full of minor states; Russia was slowly taking shape as an independent and united nation; the former Western empire was but a name, and the Eastern empire was a thing of the past. Spain's great powers, Castile and Aragon, were just uniting under Ferdinand and Isabella; France was recovering from the successive beatings England had given her, though much of her territory was still in British hands; Great Britain was not, as now, one nation, for wars with Scotland still recurred at intervals. Thus it may be seen that nearly all Europe was torn by dissensions and lack of coalition.

Yet a brighter day was dawning. In 1453 the Turks crushed the Eastern empire by capturing Constantinople, thus also ending the vague dream of re-establishing the old Western empire. This dream had impeded Italy's progress and obstructed Germany's consolidation. Now that it was a thing of the past, these and other nations were enabled to settle down and turn their thoughts to progress. Hence, during the latter half of the fifteenth century, dawned the era known as the Renaissance (or rebirth).

It was the transition period between the Middle Ages and modern times. And in this transition Rodrigo Borgia unconsciously played a strong part. Borgia was elected pope, taking the title Alexander VI, in 1492 (the year Columbus discovered America). Like Richard III and many another scoundrel, he made a just and wise temporal ruler.

He was a man of most abandoned personal character. Through the favor of his uncle, Pope Calixtus III, he had in early life risen high in the church. Now, on mounting the papal chair, one of his first acts was to make his eighteen-year-old son, Cesare, a cardinal. He also married his daughter, Lucrezia, to the son of a neighboring prince. Soon after she saw a chance to make a better marriage, so poisoned her husband, as she is also credited with poisoning one or more of his successors. Giovanni, the new pope's eldest son, was created a duke. Cesare Borgia, preferring that rank to a cardinalship, murdered Giovanni and left the church for a military career. Within a very few years, by battle, diplomacy and cold-blooded murder, Cesare had conquered for himself a large part of Italy, and undoubtedly planned to make himself temporal ruler (as his father was the spiritual lord) of the entire nation. His cruelties, crimes and excesses set Italy against him, but his father, who was completely under the young man's influence, refused to punish or in any way check him.

Charles VIII, king of France, cast envious eyes on the rich little kingdom of Naples and led an army across the Alps to annex it to his own dominions. Pope Alexander barred his way, and at last, by bribes, diplomacy and open force (combined with a fatal contagion that ravaged the French army), drove him back.

By 1508 the plans of Pope Alexander and Cesare Borgia were so far complete that the latter was about to be crowned king of Romagna, as an important step in his plan of ruling Italy, when fate intervened in a most dramatic fashion. Several cardinals who had offended the pope were invited by him to supper. Poisoned wine flasks were prepared for them by Alexander. Through a servant's mistake one of the poisoned flagons was set before the pope and Cesare. The former was killed and the latter draughted. Cesare Borgia afterwards told Niccolò Machiavelli, the wily Florentine diplomat and writer:

"I had prepared to meet every emergency except the simultaneous disabling of my father and myself."

As it was, Cesare's enemies gained instant control of the situation. The ambitious youth was overthrown and his golden plans crumbled to dust. A few years later he died, fighting in exile. The Borgia dream of spiritual and temporal empire was forever at an end.

Through Alexander's degradation of the holy papal office a revulsion of feeling set in. Temporal power, abused, reacted in the throwing off of the fetters that had for centuries helped to hold back the nations from progress. The way was paved for a return to the original sacred purpose of the papacy. The political wrongs of the system, reaching their acme under Borgia, died down, leaving room for betterment of both church and state.

CAP AND BELLS

PUT IT THAT WAY

"How do you play today?" asked the wife of the world's worst golfer. "I'm terrible; I got 144," replied the husband sorrowfully.

"What does a good player like Bobby Jones go around in?" asked the wife. "It's nothing for him to get a 72," was the reply.

"Well, you shouldn't feel so blue. He ought to be twice as good as you, hadn't he?" inquired the sweet creature.

Marvelous Nature

Squire (who is missing pheasant eggs)—Where have you been getting your eggs lately, Brown?

Brown—From my hens, sir.

Squire—But I hear you've been hatching out pheasants.

Brown—That's right, squire. Ain't nature wonderful—and puzzlin'?

—Passing Show.

A New Way

Bill was discussing automobile experiences with a friend.

"Every time we have a breakdown I get my wife to keep saying, 'Auto, auto, auto,'" he said.

"Yes?" put in his friend.

"And what she says goes," Bill ended.—Punch.

HIS COMEBACK

"It doesn't take very much to start an argument with you."

"Well I wouldn't say that about you, but why did you start it?"

Hymn of Hate

A guy I hate

To eat his pie.

His Label

"Mark me well," demanded the man who was being decorated.

"All right," snapped the tattoo artist, exasperated by the conceit of the other. And forthwith he drew across the back of his client the words: "Cured by Bosanko's Blood Bitters."

Musical Mystery

Mrs. Smith—This 'ere fellow thinks 'e can sing like Caruso.

Mrs. Brown—Well, they do say as 'ow Caruso 'ad a beautiful voice, but 'ow could they know, with 'im stranded on that island with nobody but Friday to 'ear 'im?

Had Her There

She—From the earliest day you men have blamed women for every evil.

He—Oh, I don't know. You'll notice that we invariably impute sin to the old Adam in us, never to the old Eve.

LIKE FATHER, ETC.

She—That girl would undertake anything, I think.

He—Her father's a funeral director, you know.

To Date

"Come kiss me, dear," she said to Dick. "I love you well, I vow!" He looked at the rouge two inches thick. And said, "I will—and HOW!"

deal with the least expenditure of effort. True economists write a small handwriting, but it is not pinched or cramped. The margins and spacings between words will not be large, but they will not be filled to overflowing with stinging little words crammed around the edges, fearful of starting another line. Excessive stinging crowds words in like this, closes the s's with a tight loop, cuts off the terminals to all words. All these signs combined mean tightness, but not necessarily wise economy.

The true economist does not waste time in foolish scrolls and great loops of enormous size.

Many women and men who have been forced to learn economy will write with lines quite close together, so that they can put many of them on a page, but their words will be further apart than those of the genuinely stingy cramped writer.

It is interesting to see how writers of large and small writing will cram and squeeze writing in times of pinched finances, and will broaden it out in times of prosperity.

SYNOPSIS

Hurricane Haley, skipper of the sailing schooner "Sea Sprite," is trying to find in Frisco something to make up for his years among the ice floes. He comes to Crawley's Riverside, and falls hard for the little dancer there. His mate joins him there, and made bold by drink offers to match his skipper for the girl. The crowd comes. Haley to do so, but he catches Brady cheating, and knocks him down. Brady stinks away, and Hurricane meets Polly and is immediately captured. Someone both of them seem to feel that they are meeting something quite new and strange.

"What else could I do?" she asked, "an I certainly can't cook." Her wistful smile as she said that, swept away the last of the many barriers that were between them, and Hurricane began to pour out his thoughts to one who he guessed was as lonely as he.

"Gee, kid, I'll bet you'd go wild over some of the things I've seen." Hurricane leant over and took her hand; Polly smiled at him and let it stay. "I'll never forget the time I saw the sun setting over a volcano in Hawaii. It was glorious, the natives used to worship there, and as I stood watching all those misty colors swirling about and changing like the colors on a bird's wing, I guess that I worshipped too."

"Oh, how I would," softly breathed the girl.

"I love those islands, Polly. Fellows have told me that years there make you forget all else. Perhaps I believe them, but to me they seemed like the last things that God made. You know, after he had done all the rest. They're so perfect, everything is so complete, and the contact with her and the fact that she obviously enjoyed his company.

A bell rang and the hoarse voice of Crawley announced, "The next show will go on in ten minutes. Keep your seats, gentlemen." Hurricane watched through it all, and at the end Polly tripped back to him, nor did she need any urging from Crawley.

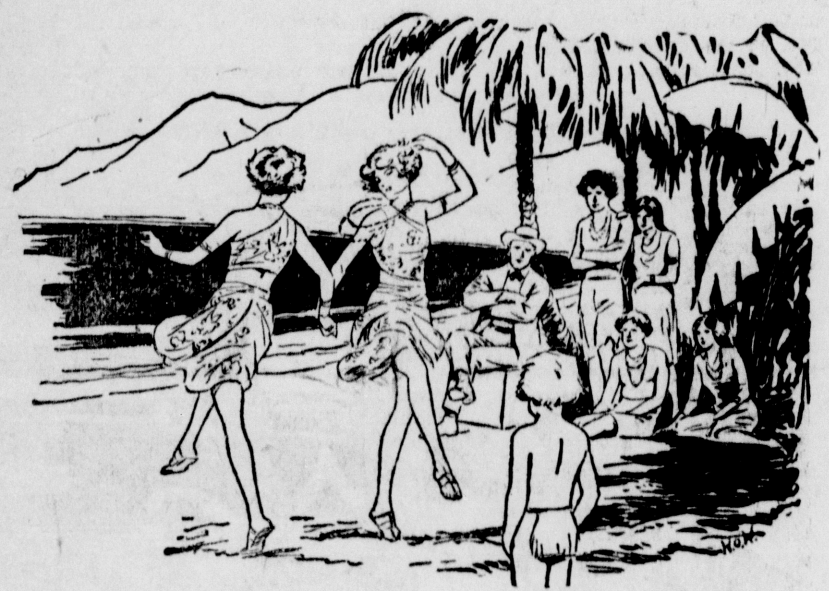

Hurricane had had time to think, and he had decided that in Polly was the answer to all his needs. With characteristic decisiveness he greeted her.

"Polly, what would you say if I asked you to come away with me? Marry me, and go and see these places that you ought to know?" For the first time in her life Polly flushed, and as the crimson mounted over her throat and face, Hurricane thought her lovely.

"It ain't fair to kid like that," she burst out. "I'd give my soul to be really happy and to do as I wanted. Maybe for someone I loved. But I guess I just got to dance."

Crawley was watching from a point of vantage, and when a waiter informed him that the man with Polly was not drinking he frowned. No progress was being made. The hour was growing late and he could not let him get away with that money. If the damn fool would not get drunk—there was always the room upstairs. He motioned to Blonde Bessie, who was drinking with two tipsy Lascars, and then told her to join Polly.

Bessie saw that something was in the wind, and she went to the table in time to prevent Hurricane from telling Polly all the things that were on the tip of his tongue. Later Crawley himself joined the

"She didn't dance, she kind o' floated."

the people that live there are so happy.

"Did you ever see any dancers there?" asked Polly.

"Why yes I did," and Hurricane smiled as he looked at her. "I thought of them when I first saw you. As I remember it, it was the feast on the marriage night of the son of the chief of one of the smaller islands. The moon was high up in a sky that was full of stars, more than you see here. And there on the beach, on sands that glistened like silver in the moonlight, the girl and her two sisters danced a kind of thanksgiving dance.

"I have never seen anyone so happy as that girl. She didn't dance, just like you, kid, she kind o' floated. As light and airy as the wind that rustled in the palm trees, as graceful as the tiny waves that came lapping up on the beach. And how that boy watched her. He must have loved her a lot, and when the dance was over she flew into his arms like a seabird darting over a wave. I was drunk. I usually was in those days, but somehow that sobered me, an' I felt kinda as if I'd been watching something I shouldn't have seen. Same as I did when I watched you, Polly."

"Oh, Hell, anyone can watch me dance," and there was bitterness in the girl's voice. "I've danced for niggers, chinks—don't see why anyone should feel that way about me."

"Don't say that, Polly." Hurricane hurried to comfort her. "I guess that it don't matter what you've done, long as you want to do the thing you're doing with yer whole heart. I tell you, Polly, you dance like she did, an' I wonder, kid, do yer think that yer'd ever dance for me? Just for me, yer know?"

"I guess yer kidding me," sighed Polly. "You ain't known me more than an hour an' I don't even know your name. When folks have done talking about me, then perhaps you won't be so eager."

The Riverside was filled up with loud voices, vulgar oaths; blinding smoke was all about her, swirling in a haze to the rim of the gallery and the chimera of corpse faces that leaned over the rail. But Polly saw nothing but a big brown man who was painting beautiful pictures for her.

"Polly, you're the first one in a long while who has asked me my name. Most people find that Hurricane will do an' that it kind o' suits me best, but I was christened Peter Haley, an' if you want to call me that, gee, kid, but I'd sure like you to." Hurricane was flushed at three and the party was now four. The proprietor of the Riverside was now the genial host, insistent upon buying drinks and very proud of his honored guest. He spoke of the sea, told of his adventures, of ships and storms, and then remembered a celebrated harpoon that he kept upstairs. Nothing would do but he must show it to Hurricane. Polly knew what the room "Upstairs" meant.

It was the room where Crawley did his rough stuff. Cards, drugs, an assault, anything that suited the occasion. But it always meant the robbing of a victim. It was not a new idea to the Riverside. In fact no one on the inside questioned the ethics of such an act. Strangers in a seaport town are legitimate prey, and in any case they squandered their money somewhere before they started a cruise, and why not at the Riverside? One place was as good as another to leave it in.

It was a pretty safe place for the victim invariably remembered little when he woke up with aching head and empty pockets. Polly knew all this, also the tricks employed. In her short stay at the Riverside she had played a part in several such episodes, and had it been one of the thick-lipped brutes, boasting of their crimes and their women, she would probably have shrugged her shoulders in this case.

But this man was clean. He was something different. He represented something fine and noble. A breath of fresh air that had been suddenly fanned into her drab life. No—she couldn't do it. Polly had been thinking quickly while Bessie and Crawley had been blundering Hurricane. Turning to him she asked:

"Well, I thought you wanted to take me home?" Hurricane had been trying to summon enough courage to ask her, and at her offer leapt to his feet.

"Sure thing. Ready to go? Do you change here or at home?" "Guess I'll change at home to-night. Won't be a minute," and she darted away.

Crawley was thunderstruck, and Bessie could hardly refrain from shouting as she thought how her rival had blundered. No one had ever crossed "elbows" with Crawley before, and lived to enjoy it. When Polly returned she grabbed Hurricane and hurried him out, before anyone could say anything one way or another.

"See you soon again," shouted Hurricane.

"Sure, drop in," growled Crawley.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(By Dodd, Mead & Company.)

The Borgias

THREE people sat in an upper room of a gorgeous Roman palace one night in 1492. The eldest of the trio was a singularly beautiful woman of perhaps forty. She was Rosa Vanozzi, the fairest Italian of her day. The room's two other occupants were her son and daughter, Cesare and Lucrezia Borgia. They were awaiting the signal that should announce the election of Rodrigo Borgia, father of Cesare and Lucrezia, as pope.

Italy, in the fifteenth century, was split up into numerous petty kingdoms, principalities and duchies, more or less independent of one another, yet all subject to the spiritual authority of Rome. The pope, too, held vast possessions, territories and armed forces. There was little coalition throughout central and eastern Europe. Italy and Germany were full of minor states; Russia was slowly taking shape as an independent and united nation; the former Western empire was but a name, and the Eastern empire was a thing of the past. Spain's great powers, Castile and Aragon, were just uniting under Ferdinand and Isabella; France was recovering from the successive beatings England had given her, though much of her territory was still in British hands; Great Britain was not, as now, one nation, for wars with Scotland still recurred at intervals. Thus it may be seen that nearly all Europe was torn by dissensions and lack of coalition.

Yet a brighter day was dawning. In 1453 the Turks crushed the Eastern empire by capturing Constantinople, thus also ending the vague dream of re-establishing the old Western empire. This dream had impeded Italy's progress and obstructed Germany's consolidation. Now that it was a thing of the past, these and other nations were enabled to settle down and turn their thoughts to progress. Hence, during the latter half of the fifteenth century, dawned the era known as the Renaissance (or rebirth).

It was the transition period between the Middle Ages and modern times. And in this transition Rodrigo Borgia unconsciously played a strong part. Borgia was elected pope, taking the title Alexander VI, in 1492 (the year Columbus discovered America). Like Richard III and many another scoundrel, he made a just and wise temporal ruler.

He was a man of most abandoned personal character. Through the favor of his uncle, Pope Calixtus III, he had in early life risen high in the church. Now, on mounting the papal chair, one of his first acts was to make his eighteen-year-old son, Cesare, a cardinal. He also married his daughter, Lucrezia, to the son of a neighboring prince. Soon after she saw a chance to make a better marriage, so poisoned her husband, as she is also credited with poisoning one or more of his successors. Giovanni, the new pope's eldest son, was created a duke. Cesare Borgia, preferring that rank to a cardinalship, murdered Giovanni and left the church for a military career. Within a very few years, by battle, diplomacy and cold-blooded murder, Cesare had conquered for himself a large part of Italy, and undoubtedly planned to make himself temporal ruler (as his father was the spiritual lord) of the entire nation. His cruelties, crimes and excesses set Italy aghast, but his father, who was completely under the young man's influence, refused to punish or in any way check him.

Charles VIII, king of France, cast envious eyes on the rich little kingdom of Naples and led an army across the Alps to annex it to his own dominions. Pope Alexander barred his way, and at last, by bribes, diplomacy and open force (combined with a fatal contagion that ravaged the French army), drove him back.

By 1508 the plans of Pope Alexander and Cesare Borgia were so far complete that the latter was about to be crowned king of Romagna, as an important step in his plan of ruling Italy, when fate intervened in a most dramatic fashion. Several cardinals who had offended the pope were invited by him to supper. Poisoned wine flasks were prepared for them by Alexander. Through a servant's mistake one of the poisoned flasks was set before the pope and Cesare. The former was killed and the latter made dangerously ill by the noxious draught. Cesare Borgia afterwards told Nicolo Machiavelli, the witty Florentine diplomat and writer:

"I had prepared to meet every emergency except the simultaneous disabling of my father and myself."

As it was, Cesare's enemies gained instant control of the situation. The ambitious youth was overthrown and his golden plans crumbled to dust. A few years later he died, fighting, in exile. The Borgia dream of spiritual and temporal empire was forever at an end.

Through Alexander's degradation of the holy papal office a revulsion of feeling set in. Temporal power, abused, reacted in the throwing off of the fetters that had for centuries helped to hold back the nations from progress. The way was paved for a return to the original sacred purpose of the papacy. The political wrongs of the system, reaching their acme under Borgia, died down, leaving room for betterment of both church and state.

PUT IT THAT WAY

"How do you play today?" asked the wife of the world's worst golfer.

"I'm terrible; I got 144," replied the husband sorrowfully.

"What does a good player like Bobby Jones go around in?" asked the wife.

"It's nothing for him to get a 72," was the reply.

"Well, you shouldn't feel so blue. He ought to be twice as good as you, hadn't he?" inquired the sweet creature.

Marvelous Nature

Squire (who is missing pheasant eggs)—Where have you been getting your eggs lately, Brown?

Brown—From my hens, sir.

Squire—But I hear you've been hatching out pheasants.

Brown—That's right, squire. Ain't nature wonderful—and puzzlin'—Passing Show.

A New Way

Bill was discussing automobile experiences with a friend.

"Every time we have a breakdown I get my wife to keep saying, 'Auto, auto, auto,'" he said.

"Yes," put in his friend.

"And what she says goes," Bill ended.—Punch.

HIS COMEBACK

"It doesn't take very much to start an argument with you."

"Well I wouldn't say that about you, but why did you start it?"

Hymn of Hate

A guy I hate
Is Peter Nye.
He takes a knife
To eat his pie.

His Label

"Mark me well," demanded the man who was being decorated.

"All right," snapped the tattoo artist, exasperated by the conceit of the other. And forthwith he drew across the back of his client the words: "Cured by Bosanko's Blood Bitters."

Musical Mystery

Mrs. Smith—This fellow thinks 'e can sing like Caruso.

Mrs. Brown—Well, they do say 'ow Caruso 'ad a beautiful voice, but 'ow could they know, with 'im stranded on that island with nobody but Friday to 'ear 'im?

Had Her There

She—From the earliest day you men have blamed women for every evil.

He—Oh, I don't know. You'll notice that we invariably inpute sin to the old Adam in us, never to the old Eve.

LIKE FATHER, ETC.

She—That girl would undertake anything, I think.

He—Her father's a funeral director, you know.

To Date

"Come kiss me, dear," she said to Dick. "I love you well, I vow!"

He looked at the rouge two inches thick.

And said, "I will—and HOW!"

A Steady Patient

Young Physician—Wonderful news, Ethel! I have a practice at last!

His Wife—What has happened?

Young Physician—I treated a man with the seven-year itch today and he is to call twice a week until cured.

Know Your Sweetheart by His Handwriting

By EDNA PURDY WALSH

Editor, Character Reading Magazine.

Is He Economical?

There are many ways of being economical. True economy should not mean saving scraps of shoe leather, but a desire to accomplish a great deal with the least expenditure of effort. True economists write a small handwriting, but it is not pinched or cramped. The margins and spacings between words will not be large, but they will not be filled to overflowing with stinging little words crammed around the edges, fearful of starting another line. Excessive stinging crowds words in like this, closes the s's with a tight loop, cuts off the terminals to all words. All these signs combined mean tightness, but not necessarily wise economy.

The true economist does not waste time in foolish scrolls and great loops of enormous size.

Many women and men who have been forced to learn economy will write with lines quite close together, so that they can put many of them on a page, but their words will be further apart than those of the genuinely stingy cramped writer.

It is interesting to see how writers of large and small writing will cramp and squeeze writing in times of pinched finances, and will broaden it out in times of prosperity.

Note—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied. (Copyright.)
